WPB Gives 'Go Ahead' On Flying Boats

TELLS KAISER TO BUILD 500 70-TON GIANTS

Navy To Take First Hundred New Craft To Be Made By Shipbuilder.

THEY'LL BE FOR CARGO

Nelson Hopes Program Can Be Developed Without Tying Up Fighter Production.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Chairman Donald M. Nelson said today the WPB had approved construction by Henry J. Kaiser, west coast shipbuilder, of 500 huge "Mars"-type flying boats, with an initial order for 100 to be placed by the navy shortly.

The other 400 seventy-ton cargo carrying planes will be built, Nelson said, if the initial program is accomplished successfully in Kaiser's Pacific coast shipbuilding plants.

"This is all contingent upon the construction not interfering with our combat plane program," Nelson added.

Asked whether WPB believed it could be done without hampering war plane production he replied: "I have hopes—at least we can try."

Nelson said Kaiser, now in Washington, would go to the coast and then "Come back and tell us what materials and facilities he needs, when he can get started, and where he will build them."

Other WPB officials said they believed Kaiser planned to construct the big sky freighters at Richmond, Calif., on San Francisco bay.

Nelson said no other builder would participate in the program under present plans.

Cargo Planes Now Being Turned Out

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Gigantic cargo planes, capable of mass transport of troops across the Atlantic out of reach of lurking submarines, are not a vision of the future—they are an actuality, in quantity production.

And even greater ships, with a capacity of 400 soldiers, able to span the Atlantic in 10 to 12 hours, have passed the speculative stage to the point where the industry could begin their construction.

CHICAGO —(INS)— Details were being worked out today for a conference in Washington designed to effect "organic unity" between the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Announcement of the conference was made by William Green, AFL president, who said that he and CIO President Philip Murray have agreed to open negotiations in Washington probably next week.

Green announced that a conference of British and American labor leaders would open in Washington Sept. 23 in connection with the agreement between the AFL and the British Trade Union council to establish greater unity for the war effort among labor groups of the Allied nations.

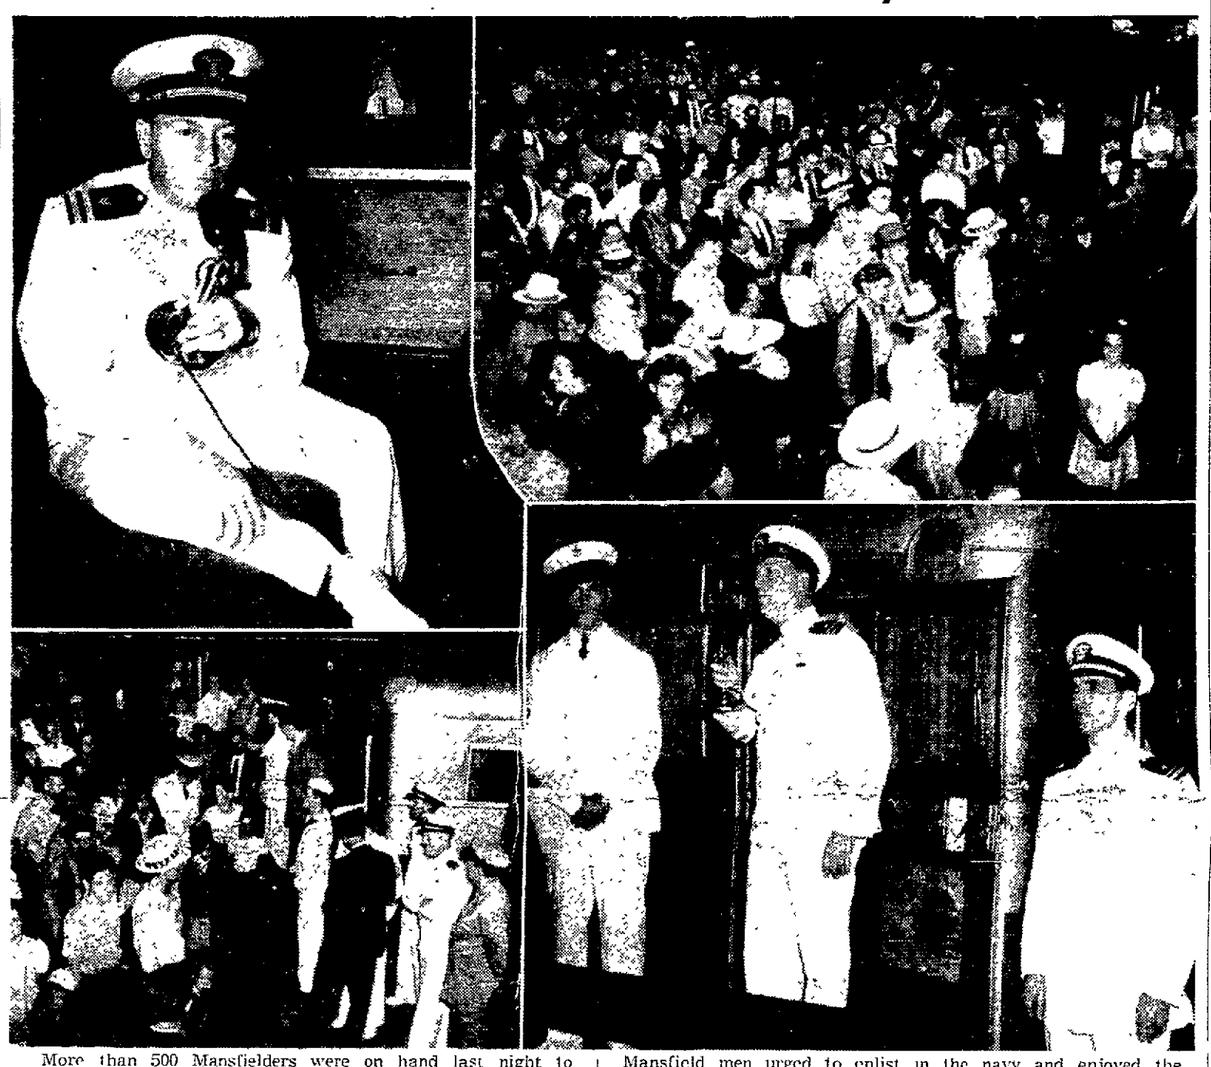
FDR Denies Verdict In Spy Case

As Mansfield Welcomes Navy Recruiters



More than 500 Mansfielders were on hand last night to welcome the U. S. S. Navy Recruiter and its staff of officers at a mass meeting at Central park. Lieut. Ralph H. Dombey, district naval recruiting officer, members of his staff, and several civic leaders were included on a speaking program. Top left, Lieut. Dombey speaks to the crowd from inside the U. S. S. CONTINUING REVIEW OF TRIAL DATA

President 'Scotches' Earlier Story Six of Eight Men Sentenced to Die.

TALKS WITH PRESS

Roosevelt Says He's Not Sure When He'll End Study of Testimony.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt said today that he had not yet completed reading testimony in the trial of eight Nazi saboteurs here and could not say when he would finish the review.

Asked if he expected to complete the review of the case today, the president told his questioner at a 10:30 a. m., press conference that he could not say.

Earlier the White House had announced the same thing, but had not made it clear whether the president would have an announcement at the time of his press conference.

The White House announcement came after publication of an unconfirmed report that six of the saboteurs would be electrocuted at the district jail here within 24 hours.

White House Secretary William Hassett gave reporters this statement:

"The president has not yet concluded his reading of the testimony."

Asked if that meant that the president would not announce the saboteurs' fate today, Hassett said, "that's all I have to say."

It had been widely expected that the president would reveal the verdict and sentences at his press conference. Hassett's statement did not appear to eliminate the possibility that an announcement might be forthcoming sometime today.

Mr. Roosevelt late Monday received the verdict and sentences recommended by the military commission which heard the evidence. He has spent much of his time since studying the recommendations and reviewing the record of the 18-day trial.

The eight Nazis, in groups of four each, landed on the Long Island and Florida coasts in mid-

Reds Beat Off Tank Thrusts In Caucasus

Germans Claim Troops Swarm to Within 30 Miles of Maikop Wells, Allies Meet In Moscow for Talks on 'Save Russia, Win the War.'

(By Associated Press)

Adolf Hitler's blood-for-oil drive into the Caucasus was slowed in two key sectors today, Russian accounts said, as the Red armies beat off repeated mass tank assaults and mopped up fresh swarms of Nazi parachutists and plane-transported troops behind the Soviet lines.

An entirely different version came from German field headquarters, which declared that Gen. Fedor von Bock's armies had captured three strategic towns and advanced to a depth of 160 miles on the road to the Caucasus oil treasures.

A bulletin from Hitler's field headquarters asserted that Nazi troops swarming across the Kuban river had advanced to within 30 miles of the Maikop oil fields. The Maikop wells are important but far less vital than the huge Baku fields which lie across the towering Caucasus mountains hundreds of miles to the southeast.

The Nazi communique also asserted that Axis columns were approaching Krasnodar, 150 miles southwest of Rostov, on the rail line to the Black sea.

Arrival of Soviet reinforcements in the critical struggle below the Don river was acknowledged by the German command, which said the Russians were counter-attacking north of the Sal river—apparently in the Kotelnikovski sector, 95 miles south of Stalingrad.

The high command emphasized the role of Nazi dive-bombers in helping German troops "in their heavy defense" against Soviet "relief attacks" in the Rzhev sector, northwest of Moscow, and conceded that the Red armies were striking back in the big bend of the Don river area.

As the Russians fought desperately to stem the 45-day-old Nazi offensive, London heard that delegates of the major United Nations were gathering in Moscow for a "save Russia and win the war" conference on grand strategy for a second Allied front.

British officials maintained silence, but it was reported that representatives of the United States, Great Britain, the Fighting French and Norway were either in Moscow or en route.

Moreover, Axis radios for the past week have been circulating "unconfirmed rumors" that Prime Minister Churchill had gone to the Soviet capital, along with William C. Bullitt, special envoy of President Roosevelt.

London quarters said there was little doubt that any such conference would discuss "the urgent task of creating a second front in Europe in 1942," particularly now that Russia's southern armies are in such grave danger.

These quarters also cited repeated warnings from Allied sources recently that Japan, with upwards of half a million troops reported massed along the Russian Siberian frontier, planned to attack Russia soon in the Far East.

On the Soviet fighting front, conflicting versions of the battle came from Moscow and Berlin.

The Germans reported the capture of Armavir, on the Baku rail line, 160 miles south of Rostov; Yeisk, on the Sea of Azov, 70 miles southwest of Rostov; and Timashevskaya, 130 miles southwest of Rostov.

Capture of Armavir would place the Germans within 65 miles of the Maikop oil fields, which produce 7 per cent of Russia's oil,

DOUBT STORY OF FIRE SUSPECT

Detectives Say Statements of Youth, 16, Fail To Hang Together.

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND—Detective Frank W. Story returned here from Pittsburgh today with a suspect in the $200,000 Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey fire, but expressed the opinion that the 16-year-old boy had nothing to do with the conflagration.

District Attorney Russell H. Adams at Pittsburgh reported Lemandris Ford admitted he and a companion started the fire which brought death to 42 non-performing animals in the circus menagerie Tuesday.

But Story said Ford, who waived extradition, was vague when questioned about the menagerie tent and the animals in it, and was trapped into making

Central Park's Cannons May Go Into War Effort

Civil war cannons displayed in Central park for many years, the captured German artillery piece stationed in front of McVey Legion post home on Park avenue west as a trophy of World War I—in fact all ordnance which can be converted into shells to shoot at the Axis powers likely will be enlisted in the Mansfield and Richland county scrap metal salvage drive.

City officials and Legion officers said today such materiel likely would be gladly surrendered, following receipt of a plea from Robert O. Weible, Columbus, secretary of the state salvage committee which has a quota of 2,175,000 tons of scrap iron and steel for the last half of 1942.

Carl L. Stough, chairman of the Richland county scrap drive, declared such articles should be added to the scrap pile for conversion into war munitions. "Other

Scores Interviewed for Navy Service During 'Recruit Day'

Mansfield marked "Navy Recruiting Day" today as scores of men with trade experience and youths classified for 1-A draft service were interviewed by a special naval recruiting staff which was welcomed last night by more than 500 Mansfield residents at a mass meeting in Central park.

Lieut. Ralph H. Dombey district naval recruiting officer, spoke at last night's meeting. He urged all men who had a skilled trade or wished to learn one to enlist in one of the navy's various service branches.

"The navy needs men of all skills," said Lieut. Dombey. "In World War 1, the United States had one of the best-manned navies in the world but was hampered through the lack of equipment. This time, it's the men we need."

Dombey pointed out that in addition to the men who have already been trained for a trade that others were needed to learn trades. He urged youths eligible for the draft to enlist for trade or active service.

Dombey said that Class 1-A youths had the right to investigate navy training before being inducted.

"It has come to our attention that some draft boards have not been informing selectees of all the opportunities and privileges due them before induction," said Lieut. Dombey. "Any man in Class 1-A or in any class is eligible to apply for navy enlistment right up until the day he is actually inducted into army service."

Lieut. V. Tippet of the recruiting staff gave a short talk in which he explained the advantages of navy trade training to not only help the war effort but to fit men for civilian industrial life after the war.

Other talks were made by Rev. Grover E. Swoyer, Gilmore Hiett, advertising manager of The News-Journal; Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, and members of the recruiting staff.

Mansfield Bids Farewell to Third Group of Selectees

Completing one of the largest mass departures of Richland county army selectees since the beginning of the war, a contingent from board 3 left Mansfield early today for Fort Hayes in Columbus.

A crowd of approximately 1,000 was on hand to bid farewell to this third contingent to leave the city in as many days. Other groups of selectees left for Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., by train Wednesday and Thursday.

The men leaving today were from rural Richland county sections. Selectees in the Wednesday and Thursday groups were from Mansfield and its immediate vicinity.

The Richland Victory Civic committee headed by Earl Saltzgaber, chairman, finished up one of its biggest weeks since its organization, handling passenger movements for the three of the largest send-offs tendered departing contingents. More than 5,000 persons were on hand Wednesday and Thursday when special troop trains pulled out of the Union station.

Because they had a comparatively short trip to make, Board 3 selectees went to Columbus by bus. This eliminated parades such as those staged by Board 1 and 2 selectees to Union station.

Today's send-off took place in front of the Richland county courthouse. The Mansfield Senior High school band played several patriotic airs.

Before their departure, Board 3 selectees received numerous gifts presented by various civic and military organizations and heard short talks by Rev. Grover Swoyer, and selective service and civic officials.

CONSIDER $200 BUTLER REWARD

Commissioners to Act In Vandalism Cases If They Find Move's Legal.

Richland county commissioners were studying the Ohio statutes today to learn if they can legally offer a $200 reward to help solve the acts of intimidation against Kinsey Morgan, Butler school board member.

Commissioners yesterday were asked by a delegation from the Butler community to offer the reward and they agreed to set up the amount if the law will permit them to do it, said Chairman C. L. Mitchell of the board of commissioners.

The commissioners asked Acting Prosecutor John C. O'Donnell for an opinion on the offering of a reward. He said the law states that a county can offer a reward only in the case of a felony and he wasn't certain that the Butler offense could be considered felonies.

A delegation of six Butler resi-

Stores Busy as Merchants Offer Bargain Specials

Despite this morning's rain, Mansfield stores were crowded with shoppers who took advantage of the lower prices offered on the first of two Mansfield Community Bargain days.

Sponsored by the Retail Merchants' association, the Bargain prices will be good through Saturday night.

Bargain days are being observed by 52 merchants in the city today and Saturday. The participating stores are marked by Bargain day banners and the Retail Merchants' flags.

"Prices being offered now are in line with the national economy program, but it's certain these low prices on household goods and garments won't last much longer," said V. H. Lodde, secretary of the Retail Merchants' association.

TIRES FOUND

Four Stolen From Shelby Man Recovered in Kentucky.

Four tires stolen five days ago from a truck owned by Otto Swisher, Shelby lumber dealer, had been recovered today at Morehead, Ky., as the result of an investigation by Sheriff Frank E. Robinson.

Sheriff Robinson said he had clues as to the identity of the tire thiefs but they had not been apprehended today. He was able to trace the tires through information provided by one of Swisher's employes. One of the tires had been sold to a dealer and the others were cached near the Kentucky village.

The tires, almost new, were taken from the truck after it had been stolen and driven to a woods south of Shelby, the sheriff said. Three log chains, a grease gun, and all the gas in the truck also were missing.

The sheriff at Morehead found the tires after Sheriff Robinson gave him information as to where they might be hidden.

ADMISSION: Reveal Japs Take Islands Close to New Guinea

(By United Press)

GEN. M'ARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia—A spokesman for Gen. Douglas MacArthur admitted today that the Japanese had occupied the Kai, Tanimbar and Aroe islands, within 225 miles of Australia and 100 miles of northwestern New Guinea.

It was believed that Allied reconnaissance reported in MacArthur's communique covered the island groups and that plane crews had reported there was no sign that the Japanese had yet established air fields in their new invasion zone.

MacArthur reported that Allied medium bombing planes had made a successful attack on the big Japanese bases in the Salamaua-Lae area of the north New Guinea coast without meeting challenging enemy planes. All planes returned safe.

The communique said also that the situation in the Buna-Gona area, 150 miles from Salamaua, had become static. Only light ground forces were engaged in reconnaissance, it was said.

Allied patrols of Australian and native troops remained in contact with the Japanese who now hold Kokoda, 55 miles from Port Moresby.

APPEAL: India Seeks Help of FDR In Demand for Freedom

(By Associated Press)

BOMBAY—The working committee of the All-India Congress party voted today to appeal to President Roosevelt, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and Ivan Maisky, Russian ambassador to Britain, to support its demands that Great Britain grant India immediate independence.

Maulana Abdul Kazan Azad, president of the congress, was authorized to dispatch the appeals as soon as the congress committee passes upon a resolution calling for a mass campaign of passive resistance to continued British rule.

Endorsement of the resolution, backed by Mohandas K. Gandhi, was regarded as a foregone conclusion.

Gandhi himself sent a message to the Chinese today to "let China know that this struggle is as much for her defense as it is for India's liberation." He declared that India's "ability to give effective assistance" is dependent on her freedom.

In an incongruous setting under a canvas tent's big top, the 360 militant committee assembled to begin deliberations for throwing into motion what may become India's grimmest bid for independence.

They had the scrawny little leader's own word again last night on the eve of the conference, that the time for non-violent action is now and that time would show what strength the congress could marshal from his masses of disciples.

There was not the slightest hint from Gandhi's headquarters of any wavering. His latest statement seemed merely to reiterate that

CHAPTER XXII

There was a penetrating silence. Gordon expected Audrey to express surprise that would smash his make-believe. None of them said a word. Presently Gordon turned, and continued:

"By the way, Morley, how did you get over the operation? You were in a bad way when I saw you last."

"Yes," Morley said. "They called in a group of physicians, specialists. It took me 15 days to come to. When I did, I had this." He tapped his artificial hand on the table top. It clicked metalically.

"Want to see it?" he grinned.

"Please don't, Clifford," Audrey said, with a touch of revulsion at the alacrity with which he was ready to exhibit it. "You know how talking about it upsets me."

He put his hand in his lap.

Audrey pushed her chair back Her face was white. "I wonder if you'll excuse me. I must see if Leslie is all right."

"I don't wish you to go," said Morley.

She was disturbed now. Gordon could see her reflection on the table top. Her face was perfectly blank.

"Why not?" she asked.

The corners of Morley's mouth went down sharply. He leaned back in his chair and looked from one to the other.

"I'll wish Leslie a good night," said Morley.

He rose and excused himself. Gordon was now alone with Audrey. He quickly moved closer to her. He whispered hurriedly: "I must speak to you privately. It is most important and you must arrange it."

He took her hand. She drew it away.

"Yes, I wish to talk to you too!" Audrey said.

"I have so much to tell you." He bent above her; she turned her face up to his.

"This game of make-believe," he continued, "started off so well; let it go on. I want to hear what he has to say."

"I want a divorce, Gordon!" she whispered.

"Quite chummy, aren't you?" The words were like a lash. Morley had come back and stood ten feet from them. "You cheap swine! What are you whispering about? I merely pretended to leave the room"

"Stop, Clifford! You don't know!"

They were all standing.

"I know what I'm doing This man is no stranger to you."

"No, he isn't."

"Why did you pretend he was?"

"He came so unexpectedly," she said, "I was surprised!" Her mind was a turmoil of conflicting thoughts, doubts and conjectures. She decided on the blunt truth, and she said to Morley: "He is my husband, Gordon Blake."

Morley had gripped Gordon's jacket front with his left hand, raised his right Gordon caught it; and then dropped it quickly. It was stiff, clumsy. Morley loosened his hold and said irascibly. "So you're Gordon Blake?"

"Yes."

"Quite an actor!" Morley's face was red, mottled with gray again. If he'd had an apoplectic stroke Gordon shouldn't have been surprised; he was that choked with venom.

"Do you think you can come slinking in here, when you're not wanted?" Morley asked.

"I'll do as I think best. My wife urged me to stay, so I'm staying." Gordon returned coolly "I'm not in a divorce court yet."

The smoke coming from Morley's mouth stopped for an instant, Gordon saw his eyes meet Audrey's. There was no more expression in her face than there was in the yellow orchids in the center of the table Gordon was looking intently at Morley.

"Sit down," said Morley. "You're right. We're three civilized people."

Morley settled back in his chair. Gordon saw his eyes move to Audrey's. There was a strange expression in them.

"Yes, Audrey wants a divorce," said Morley. "She doesn't love you; never did. She still loves me."

Gordon leaned forward. His movement had a studied carelessness in it. He saw the sudden down-pull of Morley's thin upper lip.

"That is something she and I must discuss alone," Gordon replied. "I'm here to take my wife home."

He emphasized every word by speaking slowly and distinctly.

"Audrey, do you want to go back to Moonhollow with your cub reporter?" Gordon asked.

Morley turned questioningly to her. She had been watching them both silently.

"No, I want to re-marry Clifford as quickly as possible," she answered firmly.

Her words overwhelmed Gordon. He floundered mentally.

"It won't be so easy as that, Audrey."

"Why not?" Morley was angry. "She wants a divorce and you'll give her one."

"I've no reason to."

"Can't both of you talk it out quietly without so much violence?" said Audrey.

"I'm willing; he's not," said Gordon.

Morley led the way to the library. He switched on the lights.

"Well, Blake," he said. "Now let's talk." He looked at Gordon quizzically. Gordon was an adversary to be taken seriously. One with hatred, a grudge, malice in his heart. "Help yourself to a drink, if you want one"

* * *

Gordon lighted a cigaret instead, and sat down close to Morley. Morley pushed his chair back.

"You heard Audrey say she wanted a divorce. You have to consent to it!"

"No, I don't. She has no grounds to divorce me."

"A woman's best reason to quit her husband is that she no longer loves him"

"Why do you want to re-marry her? You don't love her."

"Who said that? Why, I adore her!" Morley exclaimed.

"Did you forget what you told me in the hospital? I haven't."

"What did I say? My mind is a blank—perhaps I was delirious."

"Every word you said is etched in my brain. That's why I worked in that hospital. To be near you. All you cared about was her money. But you are never going to see another dollar of Audrey's money unless you kill me and marry my widow!"

"Her money? That's a joke! She needs a dozen attorneys to consent to every nickel she gives away."

"I'm glad to hear it. She needs to be watched."

"I warn you, Blake, clear out and behave like a gentleman."

"Warn me? Such consideration. I'm not an easy quitter, Morley."

The two men eyed each other, again coldly. Morley's eyes shifted and his mouth twitched nervously. To hide it, he got up and walked to the window and stood there looking out into the blackness for several seconds. Then he turned. His lips were straight and firm again.

"So you want me to prove in some convincing way that I am not after Audrey's money? Can you suggest a way?"

"No! Nor would I if I knew one!"

"Let me see, there is still one thing of value that I own."

"This house?"

"I don't think Audrey needs any more houses. No, I was thinking of the Jack Pot mine. According to your eastern laws, as my wife, she'd inherit half of it when I die. I've one hand in the grave already. Suppose I gave the whole of the mine to her, now?"

"Very pretty speech any woman would like to hear."

Morley laughed. He looked at his artificial hand and tapped it several times on a table.

"I think so too, but I like the idea of giving Audrey the gold mine." He laughed again for some reason, amused by the notion. "I warn you if I do it, she'll want to marry me quicker than ever; she's so sentimental. She'll want to share it with me."

Gordon paled with jealousy. "Your talk is damn persuasive, Morley. But you're a liar, and you and I both know it."

"Stupid of me not thinking of it before . . . I mean giving Audrey the mine."

"I don't believe a word you're saying. Well, I guess I'll be going." Gordon got up.

Morley grinned. "Not many gals receive gold mines from their ex-husbands."

"But I've more than a hunch this one merely receives a promise of getting one."

"And if Audrey pockets my mine, you'll let her hop a train for Reno and get a divorce from you?"

"Yes, if she pockets it, but I don't mean conversationally."

"Neither do I. You just sold your wife to me, Blake. It's a deal between us then. She gets the mine and a divorce? And you get nothing but the glory of proving me a decent fellow."

"I'm not a bit worried over your bluff, Morley. I'll wait for a wire to the hotel telling me to come here to see you."

RUSSIANS BALK GERMAN THRUST IN CAUCASUS

Beat Off Tank Attacks as Nazis Claim Advance Toward Maikop.

and would represent a 50-mile advance from Kropotkin, the southern-most point claimed by the Germans previously in their drive down the Rostov-Baku railway.

By contrast with the Nazi claims, a mid-day bulletin from Red army headquarters gave this picture of the 350-mile warfront:

Kotelnikovski sector, 95 miles south of Stalingrad—"The Germans are sending in large numbers of tanks in attempts to smash our defenses. Our troops have repulsed these attacks."

Kushchevka sector, 50 miles south of Rostov—"The Germans launched repeated attacks against our positions, but were repulsed with heavy losses."

Kletskaya sector, 80 miles northwest of Stalingrad—"Our troops launched a number of counter-attacks and pressed the enemy back, destroying nine German tanks and killing about 800 enemy officers and men."

The lone setback conceded by the Russians was in the Belaya Glina sector, 100 miles southeast of Rostov, where Red army troops withdrew at several points yesterday.

Soviet dispatches still insisted that the main battles were raging far north of the sectors reported by the German high command and declared the invaders were paying a bloody toll in their latest exploitation of air-borne troops.

Nine of 10 big Junkers transports which landed in one area were reported set afire or wrecked and the sky troops accounted for to the last man. Front-line dispatches said new showers of parachute troops were being exterminated or rounded up almost as fast as they landed.

While Soviet accounts indicated that Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's defenses were hardening, the German radio reported that Nazi spearheads had reached Kursavka on the Rostov-Baku railway, 230 miles southeast of Rostov, nearly one-third of the distance to the great Baku oil fields in the far southeastern Caucasus.

In the flaming "battle of the bend," a Russian communique said counter-attacking Red troops had gained "an advantageous defense line" and eased the threat of a German pincer thrust against Stalingrad.

In the Kuschevka sector, below Rostov, fierce Don and Kuban Cossacks charged into German lines and inflicted enormous losses on the invaders, dispatches said.

In the western air war, a strong force of RAF bombers pounded the big Ruhr valley industrial center of Duisburg and Nazi airdromes in the Low Countries, while German night raiders, DNB said, attacked the English and Scottish university cities of Cambridge and Edinburgh.

An English coastal resort, crowded with vacationers, also was attacked by a low-flying German plane which sprayed streets with machinegun fire, wounding several persons.

The RAF's foray against Duisburg, the site of many important war foundries, was the third straight night assault upon the Ruhr, and a London spokesman said it would have been considered "a whopper" in the days before Britain started her 1,000-plane attacks to scourge the Reich city by city.

On the Egyptian front, quiet again prevailed.

Nazis Claim Capture of Azov Sea Port

BERLIN—(By Official German Wireless) —(INS)— Nazi troops have captured the Sea of Azov port of Yeisk, 80 miles southwest of Rostov, and Armavir, 170 miles to the southeast, it was claimed in German war dispatches today.

The official German news agency, DNB, claimed that the Nazis were within 30 miles northeast of Maikop, rich oil center, after having stormed the rail junction of Timoshevskaya on the Rostov-Krasnodar railway.

Allied Bombers Attack Tobruk

CAIRO — (AP) — Allied heavy bombers attacked shipping and docks at the Axis supply base of Tobruk yesterday but otherwise there was little air or land activity on the Egyptian battlefront, British headquarters reported today.

RAF operations over the enemy lines were on a reduced scale, a communique said, while ground forces engaged in patrol clashes and minor artillery exchanges.

Allies Meet In Moscow For Talks

LONDON — (AP) — Representatives of major United Nations were reported assembling in Moscow today for a "save Russia and win the war" conference, the urgency of which was accepted by the increasingly desperate plight of the southern Soviet armies.

This information came from sources whose identity could not be disclosed. The British themselves maintained dead silence on the movements of their own leaders except for their ambassador to Russia, Sir Archibald Clark Kerr, who has gone from Kuibyshev to Moscow along with the United States ambassador, Admiral William H. Standley.

Reports streaming into London from both Axis and Allied sources indicated the cast was being assembled for grand strategy talks of the upmost importance.

(For the past week the Axis radios have been circulating "unconfirmed rumors" that Prime Minister Churchill was in Moscow along with William C. Bullitt, a special envoy of President Roosevelt.)

Already known to be in Moscow beside Clark Kerr and Standley, Maj Gen. Follett Bradley, of the U. S. Air forces; Roger Garreau, head of the fighting French mission to Russia; and Maj. Gen. William Steffens, Norwegian military attache at Kuibyshev.

RAPS BRICKER

Heer Charges Governor Sabotages War Effort.

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—Walter F. Heer of Columbus, candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, who spoke at party gatherings last night, charged Governor Bricker with "sabotage" of the war effort, in building up a state treasury surplus.

"Gov. Bricker calls it economy. I call it sabotage," he said.

GIVES 'GO' ON CARGO PLANES

craft Corp. and Maj. Reuben H. Fleet, the company's founder and present adviser, made these statements last night as they told the nation, in separate radio talks, that the industry is prepared to tackle the heavy transport problem.

"The problem calls for big planes that can carry large loads over great distances at high speeds," said Girdler in San Diego in a broadcast address (March of Time) "such planes are being built. Douglas and Curtiss are building excellent sky freighters. We, at Consolidated, are building such airplanes on a production line."

He mentioned Consair's giant four-motor ships—the 33-ton flying-boat, the Coronado, and the B-24 Liberator. These ships, he declared, have been in armed service for many months, and in addition to fighting are carrying cargo to all parts of the world.

"Consolidated's Coronado . . . has a hull bigger than a pullman car," he said. "It can remain at sea for days. It has a range of more than 5000 miles . . . and we have over 3000 men developing super-planes for the army and navy. If shipbuilders can build planes in quantity we will help them do so."

Central Park's Cannons May Go Into War Effort

souvenirs of the Axis defeat eventually will be obtained to replace them," Stough commented.

Service Director Fred B. Wolff said no request has been received as yet but indicated the city's compliance to the state plea which "specifically requests" cannons, cannon balls and wrought iron fences to increase Ohio's wartime junk heap. No fencing is available but the city is tossing in worn-out machinery and parts, Wolff said.

Sam Fox, commander of McVey post, explained that the war department "has strings" on the German cannon displayed at the Legion home and, in his opinion, it can be recalled for any war use, post members heartily concurring in the thought of throwing it back at Hitler in any form."

Some of the rails being removed from East Fourth street in salvaging the old street car system will be cast into fine tools, delicate airplane parts and special bullets due to their manganese steel content.

This announcement was made by W. C. Statler, city engineer, following conversations today with representatives of the salvage section of the War Production Board.

Stough announced that up until Thursday evening 43,011 pounds of scrap metal had been collected in the southern parts of Richland county. Five trucks now are operating in Perry, Jefferson and Worthington townships. Farmers are rallying to the call with outmoded plows, corn cultivators, and other worn machinery, and some old tires, Stough said

Old rope, sacks and rags should be disposed of at junk yards, but all metal is wanted for the scrap trucks, Stough explained. At the city dump on Park avenue east a sizable pile is growing out of the county drive.

Today a steam shovel and bulldozer were stripping off tons of junk in order that a crew of 20 WPA workers can sort out metal scrap.

The city anticipates a yield of 500 tons or more of salable scrap in the city dump operations which will require three or four weeks.

Born While Dad Fought Japs

Shown holding her baby boy is Mrs. Shirley Root Reid of New Haven, Conn. When the baby was born, his dad, Lieut. Ernest Leroy Reid, was fighting off a formation of Jap Zero fighter planes over the New Guinea jungle, piloting a flying fortress. The Reids were married in June, 1941. On Dec. 7, Reid landed in Pearl Harbor, right in the midst of the Jap sneak attack. Since then he has moved on to Australia.

INDIA SEEKS HELP OF FDR

Congress Party Votes to Ask Aid of Three Nations In Freedom Request.

Britain must yield now—not, as she has proposed, wait to grant independence after the war—or see the Congress party act.

Neither was there any doubt that the committee would adopt the resolution sent to it from the party's smaller working committee calling for a vast movement under Gandhi's generalship unless independence were granted. Only Gandhi can interfere, and unless some unforeseen hitch arises over this week-end to change his mind abruptly, the stamp of approval was taken as a certainty.

All that Bombay was asking was: When would mass disobedience begin? How widespread would it be? What forms would it take? Boycott? Highway stoppages? The shunning of dealings with foreigners? Even a general strike?

And Gandhi gave the word simply that a general strike was "not outside my contemplation."

His statement was issued last night in the form of written answers to questions from American correspondents.

He said bluntly that once India were freed he would, with the approval of the United Nations, be prepared to go as an emissary of peace to Japan—a project which he granted might be "the effort and optimism of a visionary."

dents, represented by Attorney A. S. Beach, Mansfield, yesterday, told commissioners they wanted something done to put an end to the destruction of Morgan's property, apparently in a campaign of intimidation or revenge.

During the past five months and since the outbreak of the Butler school fight, Morgan's tires have been slashed, his work harness was destroyed, sand was placed in his automobile motor, metal stakes were driven into his wheat field to hinder harvesting, and one of his cows was painted with poisonous white lead.

Six petitions bearing 425 signatures of residents of the Butler community were offered yesterday, but commissioners did not accept them, Mitchell said, because they "did not represent all the residents of the community."

a number of statements which did not hang together. Pittsburgh police also were convinced the youth had made a false confession, Story reported.

Circus officials, however, said their records showed Ford was hired in Pittsburgh, and discharged from "the greatest show on earth" shortly before the flames broke loose. He was paid off shortly after the fire.

Pennsylvania railroad police arrested Ford in Duquesne, near Pittsburgh. He was taken into custody when a circus meal ticket was found in his possession.

Adams said Ford related that he and a 29-year-old Pittsburgh companion named Jess, whom police are seeking, started the fire "to get even with the circus."

"We puffed on the cigarets until they got a good light," Adams quoted the boy. "The other fellow shot his cigaret into the straw. I hesitated but he persuaded me to do the same and threatened me with a knife if I didn't . . . I felt pretty sorry when I saw all those dead animals lying around."

The circus moved from here to Akron, where it performs today.

DENIES VERDICT ANNOUNCED IN SABOTEUR CASE

june after crossing the Atlantic in German submarines. They brought with them explosives, incendiary materials and money—$176,000 was found buried in the sands—with which to carry out their mission of destruction.

The saboteurs' capture was announced June 27 and their trial before a commission of seven generals appointed by the president got under way July 8. President Roosevelt denied them access to civil courts and the supreme court upheld his power to do so.

The president said Tuesday that he expected to complete his review within "two or three days." He also said he would announce the verdict and sentences himself or make them public through White House Secretary Stephen T. Early.

This is the third day since the president made his statement, and his regular Friday press conference would have been a convenient occasion for him to announce the results of his review.

Thus far there appeared to have been no leak of information as to precisely what recommendations the military commission made. It was generally believed, however, that probably one, or more, of the Nazis would escape death.

If all were convicted of espionage, sabotage and conspiracy, the death penalty would be mandatory under the articles of war unless the president choose to commute their sentences.

Traitor Says 'They Won't Hang Me'

MILAN, Mich.—(INS)—Sentenced to die for treason on Friday, Nov. 13, Pudgy Max Stephan reiterated today his belief that "They'll never hang me."

The German born Detroit restaurant proprietor who was sentenced to die in Detroit yesterday by Federal Judge Arthur J. Tuttle declared that he would appeal the sentence and defense Attorney Verne L. Amberson, in Detroit, indicated that an appeal would be taken to the circuit court of appeals.

"The hanging date was set for Nov. 13," Amberson said, "to allow time for a possible appeal.

"Mrs. Stephan is in no condition right now to discuss the feasibility of an appeal. When she is I will confer with her and talk with Max."

Stephan was convicted of treason in connection with the escape from a Canadian prison camp of Oberleutnant Hans Peter Krug, a German flier. The government charged Stephan sheltered Krug and gave him money after Krug made his way to Detroit.

Delays Executions of Two Prisoners

BATON ROUGE, La.—(U.P.)—Executions of two men today were postponed by Gov. Sam Jones until the U. S. supreme court rules on legality of the new state law requiring fulfillment of death sentences by electrocution.

A convicted murderer, Clayton Guillory of Lake Charles, and Willie Larkin of Madison Parish, under sentence for rape, were given stays.

Mrs. Annie Beatrice (Toni Jo) Henry, sentenced to death for the slaying of Joseph P. Calloway, obtained a postponement of her execution yesterday from the state superme court to await the U. S. supreme court's opinion.

Scores Interviewed for Navy Service During 'Recruit Day'

Music for the program was supplied by the Westinghouse local band. Following the talks, the crowd enjoyed community singing and saw motion pictures on navy life.

Interviews with applicants from 17 to 50 were being conducted at the mobile unit in Central park today from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m. Men from 17 to 35 are eligible for active or trade service and men from 35 to 50 are eligible for trade service.

Recruiting Officers William G. Cox and Charles Sholtz of the Mansfield recruiting station made arrangements for last night's meeting and will give the final examinations to applicants interviewed in the mobile unit.

Lieut. Dombey praised the efforts of the Mansfield recruiting station under the direction of Cox, terming the station here "one of the best in the state." Dombey referred all future applicants seeking information on any branch of naval service to Cox, adding that the recruiting officer "is fully qualified to give up-to-date details on all naval requirements and regulations."

Youths accepted for active service will be sent to the Great Lakes training station while men applying for trade service will be sent directly into trade schools, according to Cox.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, FRIDAY, AUGUST 7, 1942.

More people would reach the top if they could ascend by elevator instead of climbing.

Unheard remark: "I have a son in the army and I think it's all right if workers in munitions plants go out on a strike."

Humans are supposed to have greater intelligence, yet, as the Boston Globe remarks, nobody ever heard of a horse betting on a man.

Navy Needs Skilled Men Under 50

EMPHASIS is being placed today on the navy's need for skilled workers and a mobile unit of the navy is in Mansfield on a recruiting mission designed to secure enlistment of electricians, riggers, tractor and steam shovel operators, or men proficient in almost a score of other trades.

It is for service in construction battalions of the navy that these enlistments are being sought and men up to 50 years of age, who have a required skilled trade, are eligible. Physical standards set up for military service are also lowered for these enlistees, and such minor defects as color blindness and dental replacements are waived.

This mobile unit, with Lieut. Ralph H. Dombey, district naval recruiting officer, in charge, was welcomed to Mansfield last evening with impressive ceremonies, and is open today at Central park to give information, accept enlistments and conduct examinations.

While the age range for regular navy enlistments is from 17 to 35, special attention is being directed to the fact that some advanced ratings are open to skilled workers under 50 who are accepted for service in construction battalions.

Service in the navy is entirely by voluntary enlistment and registrants subject to call under selective service, who prefer to enter the navy, are required to take steps to enlist before being inducted into the army, as has been done in a number of instances in this city and county.

Further information on this subject can be secured by calling on officers in charge of the mobile recruiting unit today, or at navy recruiting headquarters, postoffice building.

Baruch Back In the Harness

SELECTION of Bernard Baruch as head of a three-man committee to "get the facts" on the rubber situation, and to make recommendations, serves to inspire confidence that "facts" will finally be forthcoming, instead of the welter of conflicting statements that have served only to confuse the public mind.

Serving with Mr. Baruch will be Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard university, and Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in both of whom there will be a feeling of confidence that sound judgment, not selfish interests, will dictate their conclusions.

President Roosevelt's veto of the congressional action attempting to create a separate agency to produce synthetic rubber from grain, may also be considered a sensible approach to a practicable program for rubber production, as divided authority has already proved a serious stumbling block to many desirable wartime moves.

Baruch's record of accomplishments as chairman of the War Industries Board in the first World war, and his keen understanding of present needs, recommend him highly for the position to which he has been chosen and it may be hoped that this precedent of selecting the best available men for big jobs will be continued by the administration.

Theft of 'Use Tax' Stamps

THEFT of automobile use tax stamps, which seems to be increasing in frequency, presents another argument in favor of combining the collection of the state license fee and the federal "use tax" in one operation, with payment evidenced by a single sticker displayed on the windshield.

Such a sticker would be of sufficient size to carry identification of the legitimate owner, with description of car in which it belonged, and this would make it valueless to a thief.

In the first issue of "use tax" stamps, return of a postal card was required, and this proved purchase in the event of theft, but under the plan now in effect no receipt is given and if the stamp is stolen the owner has no recourse, except the remote possibility that the thief will be apprehended.

Record of the serial number of their stamp should be kept by all motorists, who should also write their name and address on the face of the stamp and fill out the blanks on the back, giving information about the car. By doing this a stolen stamp can be identified if found in the possession of anyone else.

War Production Percentage Gaining

HOW EXTENSIVELY is this nation as a whole participating in the war effort? One way of telling is to find how much of the industrial production is for war purposes. A year ago the war goods produced were 20 per cent of total output. Now the war production is up to 50 per cent—two and one-half times as much.

The proportion of war goods to civilian goods may continue increasing until it becomes about 70 per cent of the whole, leaving 30 per cent of industrial output for civilian use.

Such figures give an idea of the extent to which American civilians will have to do without goods to which they are accustomed. This nation may never be reduced to the frugality of the English people in their present situation, but may come much closer to it than at any time since the Civil war.

Jefferson's Prophetic Words

THOMAS JEFFERSON was a far-sighted man, whose observations have wisdom beyond the immediate moment in which they were uttered. In 1815, in a sentence quoted the other day by Secretary Ickes, he said, "It is impossible that France should rest under her present oppressions and humiliations. She will rise in her gigantic strength which cannot be annihilated, and will fatten her fields with the blood of her enemies."

Hitler might find it profitable to read something of Jefferson. If he had started under that influence, he might not only have learned more than he will ever now understand about the spirit of France, but he might have learned something, also, of the spirit of democracy.

No Clear-Cut Issues In Primaries

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—With some of the primaries over, and most of the remainder to come along within the next six weeks, no clearcut issue has developed between the Democrats and the Republicans. Nowhere, really, is it apparent that the strength of the administration is to be subjected to a test.

It is true that there SEEMS to be a test in certain primaries. There is difficulty in imagining any primary result, or election result, for that matter, in this year's political battling that would give more pleasure to Franklin D. Roosevelt personally than the defeat of Representative Ham Fish.

This is not likely, if careful surveys of the district are anywhere near as accurate as usual. Probability seems to be that Mr. Fish will be renominated and re-elected.

Actually, however, this is not a real test of anything except that Mr. Fish is personally popular in his district, has a good organization, and is fortunate in residing in a territory that is very strongly Republican, despite the fact that it happens also to be F. D. R.'s home district. The president, incidentally, has never been able to carry it, whether running for governor or president, even when he was sweeping New York state by a landslide majority.

NOR is the battle the New Dealers and labor unions are waging against Howard W. Smith, in the Alexandria district of Virginia, anything approaching a test. It will be recalled that four years ago, in the year of the purge, the administration set high hopes on beating this "reactionary." The New Deal candidate against him was William E. Dodd, son of the former ambassador to Germany.

Smith defeated Dodd then three to one, 19,734 to 6,555. It is expected that Smith will triumph again this year, though it would be surprising if the margin were as wide. This time his opponent has at least a little demonstrated political strength. He is a former mayor of Alexandria, Emmett C. Davison, an important local union official, and may be backed by the large number of government workers, many of whom owe their jobs to political appointment, who have poured into this district right across the river from Washington because housing conditions in the capital have become so congested.

It would be very interesting to look inside F. D. R.'s mind as to his desires in this race. On the surface, of course, he would like to see labor triumph. Smith has earned the reputation in the house of being unwilling to entrust labor leaders with increased power, of wanting to make unions amenable to supervision of their finances, etc.

BUT SOME of F. D. R.'s supporters would not be displeased to impress labor officials with the idea that they still need F. D. R.'s protection, and the protection of the New Deal as a whole. They don't want labor to score so heavily in primaries and elections that its leaders will get the idea they do not need, the help of Mr. Roosevelt. Or for that matter any New Dealer who may succeed him.

It is a very nice point, but if one tries to get the truth for quotation in the public prints one encounters a stone wall.

So far as information available in Washington is concerned, however, that is not one primary or election contest in sight which provides a clear test of strength for the administration's war policies.

Man About Manhattan

Man of Many Titles

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Bert Lytell has more title than Goering, but not as many uniforms. For one thing, he's M.C. for the new Stage Door Canteen show that goes on the air once each week. . . . For another he's president of Equity. For a third, he's a member of the board that provides USO talent for camp shows. For a fourth, he's coordinator of entertainment for Embarkation Ports.

Suppose a cruiser comes into port and for one reason or another the crew can't go ashore. Lytell gets busy and organizes a show and takes that show aboard ship and entertains the men there.

LYTELL thinks the Stage Door Canteen program should run at least two years. It has the whole of the theater to draw from for talent. What will be needed, and will be forthcoming, will be imagination in each weekly production. No pattern is to be followed. There'll be comedy one week, and maybe highbrow stuff the next. The first program began with Burns and Allen, and ended with Helen Hayes doing a scene from "Mary of Scotland."

He has some interesting side comment on Equity, which has now about 3,000 members. Of these, 420 are in the armed services. To these regularly go the New York Sunday Times, the Readers Digest, Variety and Equity's own monthly publication. In this way Equity is able to keep track of its own wherever they are, scattered throughout the world. It was this tally of names and places that enabled the army to call its sons of the theater back to Broadway for Irving Berlin's "This Is The Army," the success of which will mean more than a cold million bucks to the service relief organizations. Now, it is said, the navy plans to do the same thing and produce a show called "This Is The Navy."

BACK in 1912 Lytell and Jack London attended a funds drive for the Sun Yat Sen rebellion. This was in California, and they were the only two white men present. "Ever since that day," Lytell says, "I have disliked the Japanese. I have had a dread of their ambitions."

Nevertheless, for three years running Bert Lytell was clamorously nominated as the most popular American film actor by Tokyo movie goers.

It was London who drove Lytell to ranching. "We writers, actors and those of us in the arts should have a spot of earth somewhere to which we can retire when the public grows weary of us," London was wont to cry. He and London shared adjoining cottages on Waikiki beach for one whole summer, and Lytell, who was making plenty of Hollywood money then, thought maybe London was right. He plunged into a 1,000-acre vineyard, plus an artichoke farm, and got his hands burned. "But then I could afford it in those days," he says.

Timely Editorial

Take It and Smile.

We don't think the president will be disappointed in his belief that people will accept hardships like the beef shortage with a smile. The beef shortage is only temporary and not much of a shortage at that, but even if it were permanent, we wouldn't worry about it being taken cheerfully.

That amounts to predicting that, if there were three portions of steak to share between a soldier and a civilian, the civilian would say: "You take the second helping." Or that, the portions being limited to two, the civilian would go hunt himself up a plate of beans.

A civilian who did not feel that way about his own part and the Army's and Navy's part in this war would indeed be a poor American!—Detroit News.

One-Minute Test.

Murmur not at the ills you may suffer, but rather thank God for the many mercies and blessings you have received at his hands.

Hints on Etiquette.

A man's hat should be removed at the passing of the flag or the playing of the national anthem. It is held over a man's heart—by brim, if derby, silk or stiff straw; by crown if a soft felt.

Common Allegiance to the Crown Plan of Present British Empire

—By DE WITT MACKENZIE

THE WORLD-SHAKING CRISIS developing over the Indian Nationalist demand of absolute freedom from Britain gives added point to the following letter from Memphis, Tenn., regarding the stability of the British empire:

"Why you and other military experts continue to write as though England can win the war is beyond my understanding. England's true objective is to save the British empire as a whole. Unless England is successful in that purpose she cannot win the war."

Before we can answer, we must define "empire. Webster's new international dictionary says it is "characterized by the supremacy of a stronger over the weaker members of a confederacy, or over its confederates, conquests and colonies."

That's clear enough, and viewing the query from this standpoint the answer very definitely is "yes." As a matter of fact we're a bit late in announcing such a conclusion, for the empire has been "breaking up," with the collaboration of Britain, for a couple of generations.

The British imperial conference of 1926 in London, defined the relations of Great Britain and the dominions (Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa) in this manner:

"They are autonomous communities within the British empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another in any respect of their domestic or external affairs, though united by a common allegiance to the crown, and freely associated as members of the British commonwealth of nations."

That declaration was formalized in the passage of the statute of Westminster in 1931 by parliament. It means that the mother country agreed that these four great dominions were absolutely free and that they were equal in all respects with her.

The bond which holds together the already wholly independent parts of the British "empire" is slender but strong. What the future will bring we cannot foresee, but it may just as easily be a strengthening as a weakening of the bond.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—The Capital in Wartime:

All of the camps and induction centers have their officers' clubs, their non-com clubs, and their recreation centers that are the privates' private domain, but as a meeting place for officers and men in the ranks, the National Press club here is rapidly developing a unique niche.

It's nothing at all to see a lieutenant-colonel and a private elbow to elbow at the Press Club bar; or a gob and commander, sitting side by side at one of the luncheons where a cabinet member or war production official is speaking.

At one of the social functions, a captain, feeling a touch on his arm and hearing a "May I break, please?" may turn to face a corporal with a fresh pair of stripes—and the answer is never anything but, "Certainly."

THE reason for this military democracy is two-fold. At last count, the National Press club roster listed 73 men in the armed forces and they range from privates not yet out of induction centers to the Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy himself. I don't know of any case yet where a former humble employe is the superior of his former boss, but it could well happen.

Some correspondents serving without benefit of bars outrank some of the army, navy and marine officers in length of service as Washington newspaper men.

Another reason is that a good many civilian newsmen here have formed the habit of dragging soldiers or sailors on leave up to the club for a few beers or a steak dinner. The effect would be ruinous if the officers went high hat at the approach of a man from the ranks.

OVER the 13th floor portal might well be placed for the duration, the legend: "Abandon the salute all ye who enter here—and check your bars, stripes, leaves and stars at the door."

The other afternoon, a young para-trooper, with fuzz on his cheeks but hair on his chest, was holding forth on the different sensations between his first and fifth jumps. One of his most attentive listeners was a colonel in the field artillery.

At a luncheon table a day or so earlier were Air Force Lieut. Rod Southwick, Pvt. Richard Rendell, Maj. Ernest Culligan, and Pvt. Paul McGee.

Technical Sgt. Don McGuire, now Washington correspondent for Yank, and Marine Master Sgt. Frank Rentfrow, information officer at Quantico, are frequent visitors at the Press club, but so is Maj. Paul McGahan, corps area information officer stationed in Baltimore; and so was Lieut.-Col. Lloyd Lehrbas, before he went off to become information officer to Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Monday, August 7, 1922.

George Briedenstein, who sold his West Fourth street home to the Knights of Columbus, bought property at 96 Marion avenue.

South Diamond street was being improved from Hedges street to city limits.

Earl D. Valmore moved from 170 West Third street to 9 Gibson avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard M. Keene and children returned from six weeks' motor trip through the east.

Mrs. Hugh Eyerly, Poplar street, was called to Marengo by the death of her father.

Mansfield service clubs voted to sponsor chautauqua for 1923 season.

Mrs. Vaughn Bates, West Fourth street, entertained with bridge party honoring Miss Florence Gernhardt of Cleveland.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On Aug. 7, 1912, some 2,000 delegates assembled in Chicago to launch the new Progressive party nominated Col. Theodore Roosevelt by acclamation with Hiram Johnson of California as his running mate. Some 42 states were represented by the gathering, the air of which was permeated by a spirit of crusading zeal. The party platform declared "the first task of the statemanship of the day" was to destroy the "invisible government" of special privilege.

Listen World!

I Thank You

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

SOME WEEKS ago when Bad Luck had me down and taking the count, I sent out an S. O. S. Not just for myself but for all the other struggling guys who fill space like this, trying to give you something every day. You read their stuff, perhaps admire. But how often do you realize that they're human beings like yourself, facing the same problems, battling the same weaknesses, bored and bewildered, often demoralized, just as you are?

So I sent out that S. O. S. asking for your understanding, asking you to help us in these hellish days of transition.

Well, I don't know how many letters you sent to the other columnists, but I do know that for weeks you've heaped my desk with new strength and inspiration, sympathy and understanding, beyond all my dreams. And I can never thank you enough. I'm trying to, letter by letter, but in case your answer hasn't arrived yet, you'll know it's on the way and this will serve as an I.O.U.

It wasn't easy to write that S.O.S. I'm fairly proud of standing on my own hind legs. I suspect most regular Americans are like that. We don't want to admit that we need help; it takes an awful shellacking to make us reach for the other fellow's hand. And yet we never really know what life is all about until we do.

For Giving isn't the greatest thing in life. It doesn't require any great heroism to be generous or smart or to dispense clever advice to the other fellow. But it does take a lot of backbone to admit you're in need and ask for help.

It has been said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." And it's also a lot more fun. But as I said before, unless you have been on both ends of the line, the giving and receiving, you don't know what life is all about.

So, though I've written this column for over 20 years, I have never really known what you meant and how much I needed you until fate knocked me for a loop. And I can promise you this—neither I nor this column will ever be quite the same again. It will never again be my column; it will be our column. For behind every word I write there will by the warmth of your tenderness, the tang of your shrewd understanding, the bracing strength of your courage. And in everything I write, my hand will be reaching toward you in honest gratitude, in shared friendliness.

Somehow I've a hunch that this is happening all over America today, not just between you and me, but to all of us. Fate has knocked us all for a loop for which we were ill prepared. Not one of us is sure any more. Inwardly we are all bewildered, upset and sick at heart. Secretly we're all sending out an S.O.S.—we who were once so confident of our own power and wisdom.

We're all on the receiving end of the line now, and though we are paying a terrible price for it, I think it's the best thing that has ever happened to us. We will never again be so proud, but we will come out of this with something much greater than pride—with a meekness and humilty and a sense of brotherhood we had come near to forgetting.

So don't put away that pen with which you wrote to me; don't withdraw that friendly hand. My broken shoulder is healing, I'm learning to walk again. But there are millions of others whom you pass daily, whose lives and spirits were broken far worse than mine, who need your faith and friendliness, your guiding strength through the blackout. Give it to them!

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

"Knock on Wood!"

Why, when bragging about or affirming our good fortune, do we say it—and suit our act to the words?

Why, as a sort of offshoot of this way of repelling bad luck, do we carry on our persons wooden charms?

The conception may stem back to the days when primitive man worshipped trees because in them were supposed to dwell protective spirits whose aid was solicited by rapping on the bark.

Then again, the practice may be associated with Christ, who died upon a wooden cross.

Hence also wooden crucifixes and rosary beads, which would be touched when making a vow or saying a prayer, thus emphasizing the invocation.

A Farmer's Diary

Who Owns This Land?

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I ASKED a farmer how much his hundred-acre farm could support, and he mentioned 20 cows, some young cattle, 20 head of hogs, a team of horses and a tractor . . . and added, as an afterthought his family of six children, his wife and himself, some relatives who came to visit frequently and long, a hired man, and every tramp who happened by that way.

"We don't farm the whole hundred acres," he declared. "There's 15 acres of woodlot that produces fuel and repair lumber, some brushy ravines that can't be used at all, and a five-acre swamp too low to drain."

I smiled and went on, musing to myself that forms of life the farmer had overlooked were making him a squatter on his own acres. An average open field supports 20 field mice to the acre, two deer mice, two colonies of bumblebees, one home of digger wasp, a thousand grasshoppers, several thousand angleworms, hundreds of spiders . . . the various webs about the grass and dewy morning stubble reveal their legions. Several hundred white grubs are surely there, myriads of moths and butterflies, hosts of mosquitoes, ants and aphids, and woods flies.

Then birds—swallows, pewees, blackbirds, larks and sparrows fatten busily on his land. The common rabbit feasts upon his tenderest clover, the burrowing groundhog enjoys the melon patch and the shocks of ripened grain. The raccoon pulls down the ears of standing corn and feeds.

The worthless five-acre swamp teems with more life than all the other acres of the farm combined. Here muskrats build their winter homes and gather grains that grow near by. Here are frogs, snakes and salamanders, dragon flies and water bugs, turtles and lizards, crayfish and mud puppies.

If a man but stops to think of it, the land is still far from being possessed by humans. The battle between men and insects is not won. The problem of survival is worth study. Who are these so-called farmers, anyway?

DAVID R. BUCHANAN GIVES PIANO RECITAL

Pupil of Minnie L. Webb Is Presented In Program At Home Studio Last Evening; Young Vocalists Assist.

EIGHT-YEAR-OLD David Royal Buchanan was presented in a piano recital last evening at the home studio of Minnie L. Webb, 44 Western avenue. Vocalists assisting David were Frank Lee Daniels, seven, Edythe Joy Browarsky, eight, and Florence Ullrich, nine years old.

For the first group of numbers on his program, David played "Marche Militaire," by Schubert, "Prelude In C," by Bach, "Prelude In A," by Chopin, and "Sarabande," by Handel. Edythe Joy sang "Songs My Mother Taught Me," by Dvorak, and "God Is Love," by Beethoven.

The next three piano solos by Master Buchanan were Beethoven's "Fur Elise," MacDowell's "To a Wild Rose," and Schubert's "Scherzo In B Flat." Florence then sang "Ave Maria," by Schubert. As his last selection, David offered the adagio movement of Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata." Frank Lee brought the program to a close with his rendition of "The Lord's Prayer," by Malotte.

Parents of the young musicians and other piano students of Mrs. Webb were guests at the recital. The hand-printed programs and the refreshments were in patriotic colors. David is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Royal Buchanan, 282 Rowland avenue. Frank Lee is the son of Mr. and Mrs Frank Daniels, 161 Rae avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Browarsky, 397 Marion avenue, are parents of Edythe Joy and Florence is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Ullrich, 124 Carpenter road.

Sorority Paper Distributed at Picnic Meeting

Sigma Kappa Gamma sorority was entertained last evening at a corn and wiener roast by the Miss Helen Lanzen with Miss Naomi Velzy assisting. The affair was held at the home of the former's sister. A short business session was conducted later in the evening. At that time a letter was read from Mrs. Evelyn Goettl, an inactive member of the sorority who is now residing in California. Miss Dorothy Blackstone was named winner of the first tennis tournament; the second tournament is now in progress.

Miss Velzy gave a report on sorority pins and an additional order will be sent in. Discussion of the sorority crest followed. A committee will meet Monday evening at the home of Miss Doris Kiraly, Linden road, to make further plans. Members of the committee are Miss Kiraly, chairman, Miss Margaret Zimmerman and Miss Blackstone.

The third edition of the sorority paper, "The Tattler," was distributed to the members by the editors, the Misses Kiraly and Helen Desterhaft. Editors for the next edition, which will be ready Sept. 3, are the Misses Velzy and Kathryn Landfair. Club rooms were discussed by the group and Miss Zimmerman was appointed to make an investigation. The next regular meeting will be held Aug. 20 at the home of Miss Vivian Walter, Rowland avenue.

Streamlined, Functional Fur Coats

By SUSAN BARDEN
(International Illustrated News Writer)

Mid-summer fur sales are in full swing, so a few pointers on fur fashions and wartime economy might be helpful to those lucky ones of you who are contemplating a purchase.

There's a fresh new approach to furs this year, and it can best be described as functional. It means that every fur coat today must be designed for multiple use in style, in quality and in manufacture. It also means that furs will be streamlined in a new approach to lasting beauty and stripped of faddy exaggerations, so the coat will be smart and right every hour of the day, over every type of apparel, from a uniform of tweeds to be the most soignee of dinner gowns.

One of the top fur fashions for the 1943 silhouette is that all-American favorite, the swagger coat, which will be seen in a new wrap-around version, slightly slimmer through the bottom.

Also important is the more sculptured looking fitted coat, now shown with a longer waistline, a softly draped top and long roll collar. And on every style for the coming season, the raised shoulders lend a smart look. Smooth and molded on top, these roomy shoulders supply plenty of easy space for suits and uniforms beneath furs, which will be seen more and more next winter.

Freedom By-Word In Sleeves.

In sleeves, as in shoulder effects, freedom is the by-word. Full mandarin or bell sleeves take first place because they're roomy and very handsome.

Joseph De Leo designed the three luxurious coats shown in the above photographs.

The rich sheared beaver (left) which is fingertip length has gracious simplicity. The pelts are in identical shades and the soft shoulders are cut in one piece with the roomy sleeves. The gentle shirring and the flattering roll collar are further proof that the latest styles are smart as well as practical.

A particularly young and casual swagger coat (center) is the one fashioned of coal black Persian lamb. It is fingertip length and has high, softly rounded shoulders and the full, easy sleeves The collar is convertible. Deep cuffs and large patch pockets are interesting details.

If you have never owned an Alaskan sealskin, a style like the one pictured is a wise and typically modern investment to consider. This model (at right) is a wonderfully functional box coat in deep matara brown, with gentle draping falling straight from the yoke shoulders. These shoulders are the latest cut—raised and softly molded and fashioned in one clear, fine line, with the full bell sleeves. The neat pockets and the long rolled collar are given the same meticulous workmanship as every other detail of the coat.

You Must Expand Meals In More Ways Than One

It's a snappy business, this stretching of rubber tires to cover more mileage. And it doesn't stop in the driveway but comes right into the kitchen where we're stretching our pocketbooks to fit the food budget.

Meals that once were "one" will expand into two meals or even three. They fit budget plans, yet each has an individual personality.

It's thrifty to buy foods in large enough quantities so they can play many roles. It's a challenge, too, to stretch your imagination to plan three deliciously different meals from a limited market basket. Your family won't recognize this expansion plan except in end-of-the-month bills.

Take, for instance, corned beef brisket. For dinner it can play one role in split pea soup made with the water in which the corned beef was cooked It has a tangy flavor and the addition of bits of the beef will bring "ohs" and "ahs" from the whole family.

Dinner the following night may be hot corned beef cooked with potatoes and carrots. Any suspicions of repetition melt away with that first mouthful of goodness.

Sorority Hostess Is Miss Ullich

Hostess to 20 members of Beta Kappa Tau sorority Thursday evening was Miss Betty Ullich, Glenwood boulevard. Plans were made to have a joint dinner with the Shelby chapter the latter part of this month. Election of officers will be held at the next meeting Nominating committee appointed last night consists of the Misses Ruth Gable, chairman; Elaine Downs and Eleanor Ropp. Place for the next regular meeting, which will be held on Aug. 20, will be announced later.

President Zachary Taylor recognized the independence of the Hawaiian Islands on the last day of 1842.

News-Journal Page For Women

Young Lives Ruined by Quarrels

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Some weeks ago this column printed a letter concerning a woman who apparently had not one friend in her own family. She had quarreled and become reconciled with her husband several times. He'd fallen in love with somebody else and the wife's family was doing all they could to promote this marriage.

Following one of these trial reconciliations the unloved wife discovered she was going to have a baby. There was already a young child. Her own sister quoted her mother as saying that she hoped her daughter would not survive the ordeal of child-birth and that the baby would die too.

Dreadful as were the details revealed in my correspondent's letter concerning her family life, the half was not told in the letter printed. There has been a tremendous response to this woman's problem. Some of the most heart-searching letters have been from young girls and boys who write me that they are the children of these ill-considered trial reconciliations, undertaken to remake broken homes for the children's sake.

In not one instance did the children claim that the remaking of a broken home was a success. Parents kept their grouches burning, instead of the home fires. They argued before the children. They accused each other of frightful things. The greatest insurance of peace, as one girl wrote, was when they did not speak at all. At meal times, when speech was taboo between the parents, there was at least silence instead of wrangling

One question naturally arises. If a home has been completely broken can it ever be mended? We're not considering temporary spats and jars. Can two people, hating each other, go back to live under the same roof for any reason whatever?

It's the children who suffer, who draw distorted views of family life from the daily scenes that go on about them. Have parents, then, the right to poison their children's view of family life by staying together, quarreling, nagging, poisoning the atmosphere with bitterness, and then saying to the unhappy children, "We are doing this for your sake?"

I'm frank to admit that keeping a home together at any cost is not the solution of the warring married couple If they pretend to build their houses of sand in the interests of their children, they should at least be good actors, able to hide their feelings of hate and resentment, and to keep things going on the surface at least.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

IT WAS NOT the old man's query which had startled me, for I had expected some reference either to Mary or Olina because of the intensity of the scrutiny he had given them.

But there was something in the way he said "the Princess Olina of Transvania" which rang a tiny bell in my memory

I was sure I never had seen this bizarre figure before even though I believed his white hair and beard to be dyed in a clever simulation of old age.

His eyes were hidden by thick dark glasses, and I wished that I dare snatch them from his face if only for a second. Then I would know whether it was only a figment of my imagination that his nuance of voice sounded familiar.

Fears Discovery.

Although I felt sure that I had not made the slightest movement or changed my facial expression upon hearing his pronunciation of the name. I knew he had fathomed my reaction when I heard him say, so softly that I had to strain my ears to hear him:

"I am afraid I have startled you, Mrs. Graham. But if you do not wish to expose me to discovery, and probably death, do not follow up just now any impression you may have received. Sometime perhaps I can explain all this to you, but it is impossible now."

He paused, crumpled a piecce of roll in his fingers and let the crumbs fall beside his plate, patently a mechanical action with no volition behind it.

"I am being watched constantly," he said, and paused, as if to let me realize the full import of his words.

Ring of Sincerity.

I usually give this theatrical cliche a mental jeer. I have heard it on several occasions, for so many men, when confiding in women, like to give the impression that they are in jeopardy of some kind. But there was a ring of sincerity in his low, resonant voice which convinced me that he was speaking only the truth.

"Please believe me," he went on, "I did not put my question about the princess idly. It is she, is it not?"

"Yes," I returned, then added at a venture: "Is she so changed since you last saw her?"

He gave no visible start at my question, although I was convinced that it had disturbed him, nor was there any hint of uneasiness in his reproachful look.

"I never have seen her before," he said, "but she has been described to me by a dear friend of hers who knew her very well. I am asking the question for his sake, so that I may report to him"

Madge's Conjecture.

I did not believe his protestation of never having seen Olina. That did not ring true, as had the rest of his utterances. But of course I could not gainsay him.

One thing I could do, however. I could put a question to him which might bolster or deflate a fantastic conjecture which had been in my mind ever since Olina received the water-color drawing and queer fan letter saying that the sender had once seen her passing in a royal procession and had never forgotten her.

"You can report to him that she is here tonight," I told him. But may I ask you a counter-question?"

"Of course," he said promptly, then added hesitantly, "but I cannot promise to answer it."

A fertile strip two to 20 miles wide borders the lower Nile for hundreds of miles, but the incredibly-fertile delta, 135 miles long and 155 miles wide, produces most of Egypt's wealth.

Idle Hours Kill Your Good Looks

By MME. QUI VIVE

There are still loafers in the feminine contingent. There are women who have never done anything useful, can't be made to, never will. It is shameful that they should be idle now, when there is so much work to be done. But there they are, reclining on their soft cushions. But I'll tell them something: their beauty griefs will be manifold. There's no such thing as a radiant slacker. Idleness mildews a woman's soul. Activity is a law of life. We were meant to be busy, to have a place in human affairs.

The soft, selfish existence is without enthusiasms. Many a woman who has been a hard worker, dreamed of the time when life would be one long holiday, has been disappointed when she dropped her chains of responsibility. She was bored. So, she found useful work to do, continued to do it to the end of her days, as long as health permitted. She is a woman alive, always alert, interesting to her family and friends.

One should have some kind of a rainbow to chase.

The housewife, toting home her paper bags full of groceries from the cash and carry stores, may envy the woman who steps forth from the doors of a large, handsome hotel. But she needn't. The permanent hotel dweller is often a woman who, having been left an income by a departed husband, has no occupation of any kind, no special interests other than an occasional bridge game or movie. She may complain bitterly to her friends, "I have nothing to do. I am, in fact, just waiting to die"

Nothing to do these days! When thousands of women, holding down their own jobs and doing war work, wish that the days were twice as long. That's always the way It is the busy worker with time snapping her heels who can always take on a little more

Our complaining hotel dweller shows boredom in her face. Her step is slow: her brain will slow up as well She is without spirit, which means that she is without sparkle or animation

Idleness leads to morbidity Too much thinking about oneself, one's disappointments and grievances Self pity comes upon the scene, that is fatal Furrows form little railroad tracks across the forehead.

Work is an elixir. Idleness is a sedative There's nothing less attractive than the "What's the use?" look

Get on the job!

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

SOME WILL NOT SEE

Two great players, who have had no eyesight for years—Sir Clutha Mackenzie, Anzac hero of the Dardanelles, and J. Patrick Dunne of our own country—never have been accused of failing to "see" their partners' high-low signal. As each card is played and its denomination called out to them, they take careful account of its meaning. Other players, with good eyesight, sometimes just naturally will not notice the size of the little cards, and consequently cost their side plenty of tricks

That contract was plenty high, and it was set three tricks at the table where an alert West paid attention to his partner's signal on the K and A of spades, the 9 being played first and the 5 second. The spade 8 to the Q then was ruffed by East, who switched to the diamond 2 to the A. South then ran five clubs and desperately tried the heart finesse, which failed, whereupon his opponents took two diamond tricks and he had the last with his final trump.

Where the signal on the first two tricks went unnoticed by West, he failed to lead a third spade picking the heart J instead. The A won this, the Q came through uncovered, the 9 was covered faultily by the K and ruffed by the club 9, three high clubs followed, then the spade 4 to the Q, and two more hearts and two final trumps, making the contract plus an extra trick West's failure to notice the signal and obey it cost his side exactly four tricks and bottom score in place of a tie for top.

What principle, regarding ruffing as against leading trumps, is vital on this deal, for both the declarer and the defenders, with South striving for 4 Hearts?

ASHLAND—Mr. and Mrs G. W Otter of this city are announcing the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Marjorie, to Sgt Donald Sower son of Rev and Mrs. D. E. Sower of near Ashland The wedding will take place Friday afternoon at two o'clock at the Trinity Lutheran church

HOROSCOPE

FOR SATURDAY, AUGUST 8

A particularly lively and interesting day is forecast from the prevailing astral operations and all should move under high tempo, and along entirely constructive lines. The mentality should be alert, clever, as well as subtle and shrewd and should push the energies to important goals of accomplishment. Investments and real estate should increase, with elders lending solid support.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate an unusually lively and exciting day, with all manner of affairs moving under stress if not tumult and turbulence. This would be hazardous to excellent constructive accomplishments, under the spur of fine mental abilities of a versatile, brilliant and also subtle quality. Property, investments and possessions should accumulate, with elders, relatives and sound organizations assisting.

A child born on this day should be versatile in intellectual and social talents, with sound abilities and judgment.

Telephone Employes Go Back To Jobs

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

(Note: My friend Gertrude Lawrence, brilliant actress and tireless war worker, is equally fascinating on stage and off, equally at home behind the footlights or behind a portable typewriter—as witness this column. D. K.)

* * *

Gertrude Lawrence Says—

They say that "wishing will make it so," and here I am, a guest columnist at last.

In looking back, I find that there have been only a few really outstanding times when I have really wanted something so badly that it seemed vital to my very existence. This happy state has probably been due to the fact that I was born into a family with Ford finances and Rolls Royce mentalities. We were so accustomed to everyday necessity of making ends meet that we saw no harm in window shopping and building imaginary castles in the air.

I remember well that in 1917, while I still had my hair over my shoulders (George Jean Nathan please note) it was the rage for ladies to carry a gold or silver mesh purse on a long chain handle. This handle was decorated like a charm bracelet, and hanging from it was a hetrogeneous collection of charms, coins, army and navy buttons, small mirror, a pencil, a vanity case (usually pink or blue enamel), and a young man's picture in a locket. This jangling gee-gaw seemed to be the mark of a truly successful actress, and when accompanied by a fur coat, well, I thought it meant definite success in the theater.

Well, dear, I waited four years and had put up my hair before someone gave me the chain purse, which was second-hand and by then completely out of style; I didn't get the fur coat until I came to America in 1924 and bought it for myself on the installment plan; the Rolls Royce car was taken from me during my personal crash in 1939, and my marriage into the peerage would now have to be over my husband's dead body!

Right now my chief relaxation and refuge lies in the little cottage here on Cape Cod, which my husband and I managed to have finished before the bell tolled. As you know, I have not been home to England since just before war broke out, therefore I have tried to put into my home here all the touches which remind me of the old country. None of this has been very difficult, as the Cape is so very English in so many ways. There are the names of the towns for instance: Truro, Wellfleet, Chatham, Barnstable, Yarmouth, Plymouth. They are all here around me to remind me of England.

Quite suddenly to this lovely spot has come the rumble of army trucks, the boom of practice bombardments, the sight of the Red Cross Motor Corps, the ever-lasting dim-out, and the warning knock on the door from the Coast Guard patrol should you have the tiniest chink of light showing from a window that faces the sea. Strangers are eyed with suspicion and are reported with gusto if seen on the marshes. In fact, New England is standing by in every way. In spite of all these changes, the Cape this summer, like England, has never been more beautiful. It is as though nature is proud of the part she is playing in the scheme of things and keeping her thumbs up for victory!

There has been plenty to do, dear Dorothy, during my "vacation." I have joined the Red Cross Motor Corps as First Aid Nurse and driver, and my old station wagon now flies two large white flags with the scarlet emblem of mercy, and is equipped with stretchers for emergency calls. I have sung at Camp Edwards, at the Red Cross hospital, and at the outpost at Sagamore. During this concert an air raid warning was sounded which lasted for over half an hour. All the lights were extinguished, but we continued the concert by dancing in the dark to the light of the red glow from 300 cigarets.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—One thing's sure, it's going to be no trouble for the movie cuties to keep those shapes that art and nature gave them. No trouble at all, while the bombs fall in the movies.

Today I saw Carole Landis, whose ends were nicely shaped by destiny, go through 10 rounds of calisthenics, just dodging bombs.

Coons

It was for "Manila Calling." By day's end, if Miss Landis wasn't calling for a masseuse then she's a husky as well as beautiful gal. 'Mid the rocket's red glare, the bombs bursting in the back room, our Carole played a game of hide-and-seek under the table. Down she went, up she came, until I bet she got the bends.

All this was by-way of assisting an actor named Martin Kosleck to make amends for his unsavory movie past. Kosleck's the young refugee chap, who has been playing all those Nazi sneaks and dogs, leering at innocent women and kicking babies. Not any more. In "Manila Calling" Martin plays a Polish refugee in the Philippines, a fellow who fights for Uncle Sam and dies a hero's death when the Japs invade.

The Japs, right today, were making it hot for hero Lloyd Nolan, hero Kosleck and heroine Landis. The three of them were in a radio broadcasting shack, Kosleck at the control board while Nolan crowded the air with a plea to Americans and Filipinos to fight on and beautiful Carole handed him his notes—written by hero Cornell Wilde.

Director Herbert I. Leeds rehearsed the actors—minus explosions—and each time our Carole ducked under the table. It was more fun, for spectators, when the "bombs" went off. For Carole that was just another ducking, or two or three.

It takes a bit of doing to "bomb" a movie nest. There's a gentleman with a length of electric wiring off behind the microphone boom. The wire leads around behind the set, beyond that open doorway in the rear, to a keg filled with powder, dust and ground cork. There's a pipe-cannon off to the side, filled with more dust and discharged by compressed air. There's also a workman with a shovel—full of dust.

For the first bomb, as Nolan read his plea, the workman shoveled his cloud of dust. For the second, the pipe-cannon popped off. For the third—as the gentleman with the wire touched it to the button — the footway back there spouted flame, smoke, and flying cork. It also spouted noise—the kind that makes your teeth rattle, the kind that makes you look for a table to duck under.

That was what our Carole did—again—along with Nolan and Kosleck. Then they got ready for the next bomb, the big one that would let Kosleck die the hero's death. By this time, Carole, either because she had got smart or the script said so, wasn't ducking any more.

She just stayed under the table.

WPB SEEKING GADGET COUNTER SUB-CONTRACTS

$200,000,000 Business With 'Little Fellows' Sought In Ohio.

(By United Press)

CLEVELAND — The War Production Board, doing business over a "gadget counter" laden with screws, forgings, mess kits and tank parts, hopes to negotiate $200,000,000 to $300,000,000 worth of war sub-contracts with "little fellows" running small machine shops and home industries in Ohio.

On exhibit on the fourth floor of the Union Commerce building are samples of 1,000 small parts needed in Uncle Sam's vast collection of war machines and equipment. Some of them are needed by the millions and the WPB, acting as a contact between the big producers and the subcontractors, is begging for "takers."

Recently a 19-year-old youth in work clothes strode breathlessly into the exhibit, wandered about for an hour and went up to the WPB attendant with several small parts in the palm of his hand.

"We can make these in our shop out in the east end," he said. "My boss sent me up here to see what we could do."

"What kind of equipment do you have?" asked R. R. Stratton, former automobile executive in charge.

"All kinds," was the optimistic reply. Stratton told the lad to bring his "boss" around for a conference. The youth's employer, an expert machinist who works in a large plant from 4 p. m. to midnight, had a backyard shop with a screw machine, lathe, planer and drill press.

He took a contract for 100,000 parts as a starter and a few days later undertook an experimental lathe job.

The Cleveland ordnance office operates a similar service in the Cleveland Terminal Tower.

PREPARES FOR MORE RATIONS

OPA Gets Forms Ready on Shoes, Clothing and Fuel Limitations.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—OPA officials disclosed today that rationing books and forms were being prepared on shoes, clothing and fuel oil, but warned that the preparations were merely a precautionary step.

Paul M. O'Leary, OPA rationing chief, declared that there was nothing "imminent" in the situation.

"We're simply getting ready in advance, if, and when, the war production board should give us instructions to start rationing other items on the consumers durable goods list," he said.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson recently testified before a congressional committee that the OPA anticipated having to put into effect approximately 15 new rationing programs.

O'Leary asserted, however, that no new rationing instructions have come over from WPB.

He pointed out that OPA did not want to be caught unprepared and have to institute a new rationing program overnight. In such cases, he explained, stocks of the rationed commodity have to be "frozen" for extended periods and work a hardship on dealers and the public.

DAMAGE SUIT SEEKS $5,000

Shelby Resident Sues Following Traffic Accident.

An action for $5,000 damages had been filed in Richland county common pleas court today by James H. Holtz of Shelby against Henry P. Weber as the result of a traffic mishap Aug. 7, 1940, on West Main street in Shelby.

Holtz contends he was knocked down by a car allegedly driven negligently and at excessive speed by the defendant. In his petition, Holtz states he suffered a fractured leg, lacerations on his hip, and injuries to his left shoulder which have made it impossible for him to continue his work in a normal manner.

Representing the plaintiff in his suit are Attorneys C. J. Anderson and J. V. Will, Mansfield, and Theodore Lutz, Shelby.

OHIO BEES FACE STARVATION, KEEPERS START FEEDING SUGAR

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — Ohio's bees not only have cut production 25 per cent, but face starvation in a few years unless they are fed rationed sugar next winter, an apiary expert reported today.

C. A. Reese of the Ohio department of agriculture said a survey showed heavy spring rains and cold weather had destroyed nectar producing qualities of many plants except in a few areas and that some beekeepers were feeding sugar to "save bees in the hope of securing a fall honey crop."

Production ranges from no honey in some localities to 75 pounds per colony in others, he asserted.

Reports are optimistic, however, "regarding the possibilities of the fall flow of nectar" which beekeepers in most sections believe should be sufficient to winter their bees, he added.

Reese gave this picture of the situation.

Central Ohio—One of the shortest crops in years, many colonies not having sufficient stores for winter. Some operators may find it necessary to move bees to other sections.

Muskingum watershed — Some colonies near starvation, others producing well.

Mahoning Valley — Practically no surplus honey; some beekeepers already feeding sugar.

Little Miami valley—Production 50 per cent of normal.

Northwestern counties — Insufficient stores for wintering bees; satisfactory fall nectar flow expected.

Miami — Mad river valleys — Production averages 60 pounds a colony.

Franklin county, north to Lake Erie—Output poor.

RESTS DEFENSE

Naval Officer Maintains Singer Gave Him Automobile.

SAN FRANCISCO—(AP)—Lieut. Comdr. Maurice N. Aroff's personal defense against navy charges he accepted Tony Martin's $950 car as a gift rested today on a contention he has made repeatedly—that he took the automobile only so he could sell it for the singer-actor.

The prosecution's version of the automobile transaction, keystone of its charges of scandalous behavior and falsehood against Aroff, is that the car was an outright gift from Martin to Aroff, accepted by the latter as compensation for his efforts in helping the singer obtain a naval chief specialist's rating.

AGREE TO LET WPB SETTLE WAGE DISPUTE

Workers Announce Agreement Ending Three-Day-Old Walkout of 2,100.

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND — Striking telephone maintenance workers resumed work today, announcing an agreement with Ohio Bell to let the War Labor board take up their wage dispute Aug. 17, with any wage increase retroactive to July 12.

The 2,100 Ohio Bell Telephone company workers had been on strike since Tuesday, and the Telephone Operators' union had threatened to join the walkout.

J. W. Curtis, representing the plant council of the Ohio Federation of Telephone Workers, announced the settlement formula, saying it represented a clear-cut victory for the union. H. J. Barber, Ohio Bell Vice-President, said the strike was over, picket lines had been removed and "service will be normal today."

The maintenance workers, limited geographically to northeastern Ohio, are seeking wage increases in line with the war labor board's settlement of the "Little Steel" cases.

Announcing last night that telephone operators were about ready to join the maintenance workers in their walkout, Mrs. Theresa Donahey said she and other union officers had been "sitting on the lid for three days to prevent the rank and file from going on strike." Mrs. Donahey is president of the Northeastern Traffic council of the Ohio Federation of Telephone Workers.

Many operators were off work yesterday. They refused to go through picket lines established by the maintenance workers. Traffic council estimated 1,000 operators were idle in the Cleveland area and another 500 in Akron, Canton, Youngstown and surrounding areas.

The company said it had no figures on the number out, but believed the council's estimate was high since there are 2,600 operators in the northeastern district and only minor service difficulties were encountered.

The maintenance workers' strike was certified to the war labor board by Labor Secretary Frances Perkins after the company rejected demands for a raise commensurate with the 44-cent daily increase granted "Little Steel" by the WLB. The men previously had sought $5 weekly raises on their $20 to $58 a week scale.

630 Passengers Marooned as Ship Rams River Dock

TOLEDO —(AP)— The excursion steamer Theodore Roosevelt rammed its Maumee river dock in downtown Toledo last midnight, causing damage so extensive that the 630 passengers were marooned aboard ship nearly four and a half hours.

Police Lieut. Glen Berning reported that two Toledo women were injured, neither critically, when hurled to the vessel's deck from a stairway. These he identified as Mrs. Lucille Defko, 23, and Mrs. Lenore Jones, 24.

After a moonlight excursion in Maumee bay, the three-deck steamer was readying to dock when it suddenly lurched forward. The prow rammed through the steel-and-wood dock and ploughed up nearly 20 feet of shore earth.

"Engine room signals must have been mixed up," the officer said. An investigation is under way.

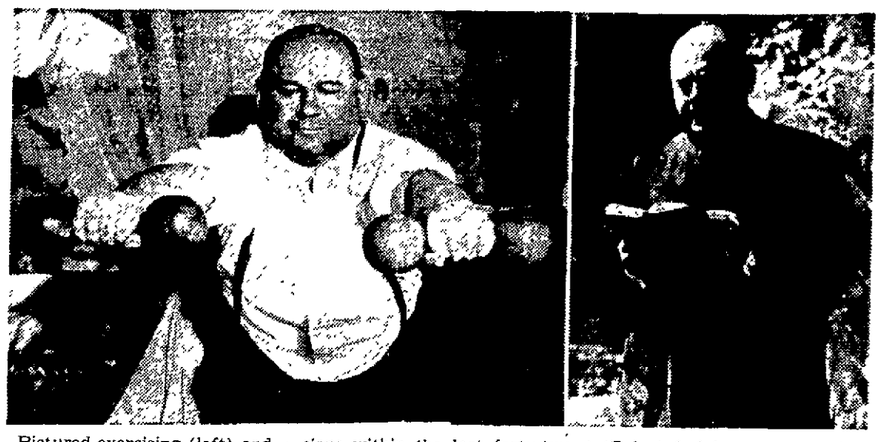
Priest Gives 50 Transfusions In 42 Months



Pictured exercising (left) and in his clerical garb is Rev. Alexander M. Butkowski of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., who has given fifty free blood transfusions within the last forty-two months. Unlike most blood donors, Father Butkowski doesn't lie down after giving a transfusion. "Frankly," he says, "I just feel hungry—very hungry—when I get off the operating table. I usually take a walk for a couple of miles, and then come home to a good dinner."

Books For Children

(Available at Mansfield Public Library)

Two recent nature books can now be borrowed from the children's room at Mansfield Public library. One is written like a story and is beautifully illustrated with photographs. The other is a book of general information useful at this season of the year if one is out-of-doors.

THE TALE OF THE PROMETHA MOTH, by Henry B. Kane—In rhythmic prose with clear word pictures the life-cycle of this beautiful moth is described through all the changes and hazards. On each page there is a simple line drawing to illustrate the text and on the opposite leaf will be found a full-size photograph of breathtaking beauty. To be fully appreciated this book should be read aloud and thoroughly examined.

OUT OF DOORS IN SUMMER, by C. J. Hylander—This is the second of four books designed to acquaint children with interesting things in nature in the different seasons. It describes leaves, animals, flowers, reptiles, fungus growths, seashore life, and water birds so its information is useful in many localities. Numerous illustrations by the author clarify the simple text.

BOY SCOUTS HIKE TO CAMP

Boy Scouts of Troop No. 7, only colored troop in the Johnny Appleseed area, left this morning for an overnight hike at Camp Avery Hand, jr. They will return Saturday.

Six tenderfeet, initiated at a meeting this week, are expected to be among those participating in the hike. They are Herbert Davis, Carl, Kenneth and Wallace Cline, Earl Jester, jr., and Taylor Styles.

The contingent will be supervised by Robert Staples, scoutmaster, and Elroy Jones, junior assistant scoutmaster.

START PRODUCTION

GALION—"Almost Eighteen" a light comedy will go into production on Monday, according to Jack Quatman, director of the Galion community players dramatic club. Because of high costs of production club members have decided upon this play rather than others previously selected. Sam Manning, publicity director, stated that the cast would be chosen Monday and rehearsals will begin immediately.

Sport Podge by REX HESS

Whenever two teams, or two contestants meet in the field of sport, each is likely to have its own supporters in the crowd, but usually there's a large part of the crowd which doesn't care particularly which side wins, and which automatically starts cheering for the underdog in case one of the two competitors happens to be the favorite in the dope sheet.

Now this is a quirk of human nature which I can readily understand since I often sit on the sidelines at a contest in which I have no particular interest in the ultimate winner, and find myself pulling for the underdog to make things interesting for the favorite, and even to score an upset. All in the spirit of good, clean fun.

* * *

This is what happened this week in the opening games of the city softball series in which the dopesters picked Westinghouse to run wild over Ohio Public Service, and in which, truth to tell, the O. P. S. players at the start hoped for nothing better than that they'd make things interesting and wouldn't get licked too badly.

Each team had its supporters, and I give the Westinghouse rooters plenty of credit for sticking loyally to their heroes to the bitter end of Wednesday night's 13-6 debacle.

But the large part of the otherwise neutral crowd was pulling, vociferously, for O. P. S., and got a big bang out of the proceedings in that series-evening game.

Well, that's all right. The crowd had nothing against the Westies. And the Westies took the razzing good naturedly enough. Most of them have been playing ball long enough to know the score.

And did they cry about their licking? Not so you could notice it. Most of them went over to congratulate Jim Musille on his three-hit game and to chin in friendly fashion with, of all people, the umpires.

* * *

Jabbo Bosco, Westinghouse catcher, is guy who is always grabbing a ball and running to the opposition bench to tag a runner who has just scored, or throwing to a base and claiming the runner failed to touch the sack.

And these antics bring down on him the boos and the bird from the crowd in large quantities, and you'd get the idea, maybe, that here is a guy who is hard to get along with.

So I was interested in hearing what he'd have to say after that 13 to 6 shellacking.

* * *

"You know," says Jabbo, "we could have raised $150 or more for the U. S. O. if we'd taken up a collection in the crowds we've had the last two nights." Not a bad guy at that, is he?

Red Birds Take Association Lead

(By Associated Press)

The Columbus Red Birds, last years champions of the American association and preseason favorites to repeat, today led the league for the first time after spending three months gaining enough momentum to put them in the running.

They blasted Milwaukee 8 to 1 and 2 to 1 last night, while Kansas City split with Toledo and Minneapolis lost twice to Louisville.

Columbus' Red Munger turned in his 11th triumph of the season by beating the Brewers in the opener. Ted Wilks allowed the Brewers only six hits in the nightcap for his ninth win.

* * *

Toledo downed Kansas City 4-3 in the initial tilt, but the Blues worked behind the four-hit job of Lefty Johnny Johnston to win the closing game 1 to 0.

Louisville cooled off Minneapolis 1 to 0 and 7 to 2.

St. Paul was shoved farther into the cellar as Indianapolis racked up 6 to 1 and 3 to 2 victories.

DAYTON RECAPTURES SECOND POSITION

DAYTON —(AP)— Dayton recaptured second place in the Mid-Atlantic league last night, defeating Erie 1 to 0 and 4 to 0 in the first of four consecutive doubleheaders between the teams. The Ducks hold a two-game advantage over Erie in the standings.

Canton decisioned Charleston 2 to 1 and the Chicago Cubs shut out their farm club, Zanesville, 4 to 0 in an exhibition game.

Senators, White Sox Show Life

Hose Win Six in Row, Nats Seven Out of Nine.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

WITH practically no fanfare two of the American league clubs suffering from sleeping sickness as the result of staying too near the contagious cellar zone suddenly have shown unexpected signs of life.

* * *

The Chicago White Sox have won half a dozen games in succession in recent days and the Washington Senators have won seven out of nine in the last couple of weeks for what amounts to a sizzling spurt for the Nationals.

Last night the Senators set down the New York Yankees 6-3 in a free-hitting affair in which Washington made 14 blows and the Yanks 11. The usually flawless Yanks contributed a couple of errors to rookie Hank Borowy's second defeat of the season.

The White Sox whipped the Detroit Tigers 4-1 with Edgar Smith pitching six-hit ball and losing a shutout because Jim Bloodworth belted a home run in the eighth inning.

Evidence that Chicago's hitless wonders are soaring is seen in the fact that Smith, the unlucky southpaw who has lost 17 times, was able to gain his third victory.

* * *

In the only other American league game the Boston Red Sox scored their second straight shutout as Bill Butland, ordinarily used for relief chores, pitched four-hit ball to beat the Philadelphia Athletics 2-0.

Cleveland's doubleheader at St Louis was postponed.

Only one game was scheduled in the National league and in this the New York Giants released all the pent-up fury of their last three days to overwhelm the Brooklyn Dodgers 8-0 with five home runs and a steady seven-hit pitching performance by Prince Hal Schumacher.

Mel Ott hit two of New York's circuit blows, bringing his total for the season to 18, and Bill Werber, Mickey Witek and Buster Maynard accounted for the others.

Hogan Leads on Ten-Foot Putt

Edges Wood, Guldahl In Canadian Open.

TORONTO —(INS)— A 10-foot putt, sunk on the 18th green put Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., ahead today in the first round of the Canadian Open golf tournament for a record-breaking 65.

The little Pennsylvanian just edged out Craig Wood of Mamaroneck and Ralph Guldahl of Sante Fe, both of whom just prior also set a new record for the course with a tied 66.

* * *

Going around the 6,543-yard Mississauga course in seven under par, Hogan broke the record of 68 previously set in 1931 by Walter Hagen when winning the Canadian Open for that year. Hagen's score was tied in 1937 by Gordon Brydson but never beaten until yesterday's play.

* * *

Tony Penna of Dayton, O., shot a 69 while tied at 70's were Willie Lamb of Toronto, Bobby Reith of V...dsor, Jules Huot of Quebec and Jerry Prouix of Montreal.

Windy Loses 3-Hit Contest

Locomotives Booked To Meet Travelers Today.

Bob Winbigler pitched three-hit ball but two of those hits were home runs, one with a man on base, and Plymouth Locomotives dropped a 3-4 decision last night at Galion to the Jaycees of the Ohio State semi-pro league.

* * *

Locomotives scored all their runs in the first inning. Noblet hit for the circuit for Galion in the second, and Ertler's homer with Ernst on the sacks tied the score in the fourth.

An error and a single scored Galion's winning run in the sixth, and the umpire called the game on account of darkness.

Plymouth is all set to shoot the works against Mansfield Travelers tonight at the Mansfield Fairground. Bill Boliantz, Mansfield chucker who has turned in a one-hit and a two hit victory in Cleveland Class A federation baseball this summer, will be on the mound for Plymouth.

* * *

Pitching for the Travelers will be Petie Beer, star moundsman of last year's Ontario team, who is home on furlough from the army, and who has been doing plenty of hurling in Georgia army camps.

* * *

With the Plymouth team composed almost entirely of players from Mansfield and vicinity, tonight's game is expected to draw the largest crowd of the season. It's booked for 6:30

Stolz Cheered By Crowd As He Carries Helpless Foe

By JACK CUDDY

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—The brutal business of prize fighting — in which men are disfigured by blows and bloodied and knocked slap-happy while the crowd roars for the kill—had one of its rarest interludes last night in which the arena throng turned "thumbs up," as it rarely did in the days of Nero, and actually applauded a lad who refrained from knocking out his opponent in the last round.

* * *

Unquestionably, the crowd of more than 12,000, including 9,468 cash customers, must have sensed the drama that was unfolding before its eyes there in the ring light in Madison Square Garden, as young Allie Stolz grinned in the 10th round and refrained from giving the coupe de grace to Chalky Wright, an elderly, helpless colored fighter who tottered about the ring on rubber legs.

They were fighting for a shot at the lightweight crown—for a big-money title fight with Champion Sammy Angott at the Garden on Nov. 13—and a kayo would have meant much to the record of Stolz who almost licked Angott last May. But Stolz, a 23-year-old kid from Newark, N. J., forgot the money angle—forgot the harsh ring lessons he had learned in his previous heartbreaking years—as he saw the helpless old fellow swaying before him.

The old man was Chalky Wright, recognized in New York and affiliated states as featherweight champion of the world—Wright who had promised to belt out young Stolz, the No. 1 lightweight contender, and thus remove the major obstacle preventing his shift from the featherweight throne to the lightweight pedestal. Wright was out to kayo young Stolz and he tried manfully in the early rounds to turn the trick with his explosive short punches to body and head.

But the ancient Los Angeles battler, whose age has been estimated variously from 30 to 40, had no chance after the fifth round. Young Allie's weight superiority of 132¼ to 128 pounds, and his youth and zing began to tell in the sixth round, when a hooking attack had Chalky staggering at the bell.

* * *

Wright, who had won only the fifth round, clinching it on a Stolz foul, and who had lost the third and fourth rounds on low-blow fouls, was in pitiful shape in the 10th round—bleeding from a gashed nose and gashed left brow. Then Stolz hit him a crashing right hook to the chin. Wright's ancient knees buckled and he almost went down. Two more hooks followed to the same spot and Chalky was ready for the canvas.

Then Stolz grinned — showing his bluish-white mouthpiece to the crowd—and he stepped in, but he didn't pole-axe the helpless Wright. Instead, his arms encircled Chalky and he whispered in his ear:

"How do you feel?"

* * *

"Okay," replied Chalky from groggyland.

"Good!" said Stolz, "don't worry, I'll carry you the rest of the round."

* * *

The round had about two minutes to go, and Stolz carried Wright, now holding up his staggering opponent, now boxing at shadows and missing Chalky by inch-fractions until the final gong. Meanwhile, the crowd that sensed Wright was ready for the kayo, was silent as the burlesque began. Then a ripple of applause started in appreciation of Allie's all-too-evident gesture—a ripple that became a girder-shaking roar as the farce went on, and ended in a grand ovation for both.

In his dressing room Stolz said, "Sure, I could have knocked him out, but what the hell for? He's not a bad old feller."

Four Buckeyes Picked for All-Star Game With Bears

By RODGER NELSON

COLUMBUS— (INS) —Last fall Coach Paul E. Brown of Ohio State achieved a great triumph in his inaugural year at the helm of Buckeye gridiron destinies. Today will mark another banner day for the 33-year-old "Miracle Man from Massillon" when four of his charges of last fall embark for training in preparation for the annual collegiate all-star football game at Chicago's Soldier field Aug. 28.

* * *

Two of his lads will be starters in that game — picked by football addicts from coast to coast as the top ball players at their respective positions on the collegiate gridiron last fall—Jim Daniel at tackle and Jack Graf at fullback. The other two finished no less than fifth in the nationwide poll—Dick Fisher at halfback and last year's captain, Jack Stephenson at the other tackle.

To have two starters in the annual classic where the pick of the graduating seniors of the collegiate circles tangles with the world champion professional team—this year the Chicago Bears—is an unprecedented feat in the Buckeye grid realm. In fact, when all-American Esco Sarkkinen started in the 1940 clash, it marked the only time an Ohio State alumnus had merited a starting berth prior to this year.

From the naval base at the University of Iowa, Ensign Fisher will report to All-Star Coach Bob Zuppke: from the Great Lakes Naval Training base, Company Commanders Stephenson and Daniell will check in with their former opposing coach, and from the campus of Ohio State where he is finishing up his college work, army-bound, will come Graf.

And if one should ask any of the players to what they attribute their success of last fall when the Scarlets became the scarlet scourge of old and marched through an eight game schedule with six wins, one loss and a tie—undoubtedly the accusing figure would point to Brown.

Graf skyrocketed into the nation's No. 1 fullback in a single season from a position of fifth string quarterback of a year previous and climaxed his western conference career by being voted the most valuable player in the league. Brown's instinct to jockey players into suited positions seems to account for the remarkable turnover in the career of a lad, who in 1940, sulked on the Ohio State bench while his teammates were mired in a 40-0 humiliation defeat at the hands of mighty Michigan, but who, a year later, led his teammates to one of the most glorious "moral victories" in Ohio State history against the same Michigan team, as the Bucks bucked seemingly insurmountable odds and tied the Wolverines, 20-20.

The effect of Brown's inspirational leadership on Jim Daniell was summed up by the burly tackle himself in a recent letter after announcement of his starting berth in the "dream game": "I'm thankful that I played my last year under Paul Brown and that he made me change as much as he did. I'm going out on that field and show a few people just who was the 'coach of the year'."

Fisher was made over from an ordinary second or third string back to one of the most feared ball carriers in the Big Nine while Stephenson was converted from an enthusiastic, over-sized "kid" to a hard-charging, victory-bent leader for his Scarlet mates.

* * *

Only time can tell if this sudden upturn of the Buckeye grid fortunes is just a flash in the pan, or whether it is destined to become a landmark at the Scarlet and Gray institutions. Whatever it may be, Ohio State fans are reveling in it now and if they have anything to say about it, the situation can go on indefinitely.

Ohio's Hawaiian Swimmers Lead Field in A. A. U.

NEW LONDON, Conn.— (U.P.) — Defending Champions Bill Smith and Kiyoshi Nakama of Hawaii, led 90 swimmers in a three-day assault on world and American records in the national AAU swimming and diving championships today.

* * *

Team honors were expected to go to either Ohio State or Yale in this carnival, transplanted here from Seattle, Wash., because of west coast war restrictions.

* * *

Competing for Hawaii's Alexander House last year, Smith and Nakama won four titles. Their 1941 teamates have not entered because of the war. Smith, defending champion in the 200 and 400-meter races, represents Alexander House again but Nakama, title holder at 800 and 1,500 meters, performs for Ohio State. He is an overwhelming favorite but Smith is expected to have plenty of opposition from Alan Ford, Yale freshman star from the canal zone.

Left undefended by the absentee Hawaiians are the 200-meter breast-stroke, 300-meter individual medley and 100-meter freestyle titles.

Heading the field in the three-meter dive were Sammy Lee, the little Occidental college star from Los Angeles and Miller Anderson of Columbus, O., the indoor champion. This title was vacated by Earl Clark of Ohio State.

Mark Follansbee, Ohio State's captain and Big Ten champion; Ed Nista of Providence, R. I., and Danny Dannebaum, Yale captain, were favored in the backstroke.

Other stars entered were Paul Harron, Los Angeles A. C. sprint star; Jack and Bill Ryan of Pawtucket, R. I., representing Ohio State; Jerry Kershner, Columbus, O., distance swimmer; Howie Johnson, New Haven, former Yale captain; Parnell Callahan and Johnny Sorman, New York A. C. breaststrokers and Divers Charley Batterman and Frank Dempsey, both of Ohio State.

Triple Play Wins One for Prospect

First triple play of the season saved a 6-2 victory for Prospect juniors over Brinkerhoff in the boys' softball league yesterday.

With the bases loaded in the last inning, Rowe snagged a line drive, stepped on third for the second out, and tossed to second to complete the triple killing and end the ball game.

North Lake swamped Empire 18 to 5 in the other league game.

NEW YORK—(Wide World)—Henry Armstrong's "comeback," as everyone figured, was dictated by lack of dough, but did you know just how broke Hennery is? . . . Well, the other day he sold a $50,000 annuity, on which he paid $19,000, for only $14,600. . . . Dick Shikat, the rassler, reports from Chile that there's a terrific boom in the mat racket down there since they imported grunt-and-groan tactics from the United States. . . . The Manhattan and N. Y. U. track teams, red-hot rivals, had to declare an armistice the other day when Emil Von Elling, N. Y. U. coach, married Dorothy O'Brien and picked Manhattan's Pete Waters as his best man. . . . Tip from the west coast is California to win the conference grid title if the season is played out of schedule.

PROTESTS RATION

PUEBLO, Colo.—(U.P.)— The Colorado State Hospital for Insane has issued a formal protest against sugar rationing.

Superintendent F. H. Zimmerman informed the Colorado rationing board that he had found it "almost impossible to provide our patients with a proper diet" under the small allotment granted the hospital.

Zimmerman says his patients need a diet with high sugar content and have no access to candy, sugar in restaurants and other auxiliary supplies of sweets.

IRREGULARITY MARKS ACTION IN STOCK MART

Retail Spending Has Slight Pick-up During Week, Report Shows.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Leading stocks continued to shift over a slightly irregular course in today's market proceedings.

Small fractional advances were posted for U. S. Steel, Standard Oil (NJ), U. S. Rubber, Southern Pacific and American Can. On the offside were Union Carbide, Republic Steel, Dow Chemical, Texas company and United Fruit.

A slight pick-up in this week's retail spending throughout the country, as summarized by Dun & Bradstreet, provided mild cheer for holders of merchandising shares. While dollar volume was larger than in the preceding week, the aggregate still was 5 to 10 per cent under the like 1941 period.

Notice was taken of the federal reserve board estimate that the nation's department store sales in the week ended Aug. 1 dipped 6 per cent below the corresponding days last year. In the week before there was a year-to-year increase of 5 per cent.

THEATERS

Ends Showing Today.

Packed with action but no fatalities, "Twin Beds" proves a hilarious comedy having its final showings at the Ohio theater today. Joan Bennett and George Brent are co-starred in the feature and what with Mischa Auer's difficulty in learning to do the Conga and Brent's tripping over rugs, the filming was filled with dangers in the making. Dorothy Lamour and Richard Denning head the cast in "Beyond the Blue Horizon" opening at the Ohio Saturday.

Exciting Plot.

The tense and exciting plot in "Mister V" starring Leslie Howard at the Madison theater doesn't give much time for day dreaming. In addition to that, the settings are outstanding, especially the one picturing a typical German beer garden on the outskirts of the capital. Climaxing the entire show is Howard's race for the Swiss border. On the same bill is "Sundown Jim" with John Kimbrough, former football star of Texas A & M. Saturday starts the laugh-riot. "They All Kissed the Bride," with Melvyn Douglas and Joan Crawford sharing honors.

'Man From Montana.'

Showing today and tomorrow at the Park theater is Johnny Mack Brown, as the fighting sheriff, in "Man From Montana." Included in the cast are Fuzzy Knight and Nell O'Day. Supporting roles are portrayed by Jeanne Kelly, Butch and Buddy, the mischievous musical kids and The King's Men, popular singing group of radio and screen. The picture deals with feuds between cattlemen and homesteaders and a sheriff, who is torn between loyalty and duty. Second feature is the timely hit showing the war in Russia, "Our Russian Front."

New Film Starts.

Starting today at the Ritz theater comes "Rock River Renegades." Called into Rock River by the urgent summons of their pal, Luke Graham played by Kermit Maynard, the boys lose no time in finding action and romance. They discover an overturned stagecoach and a beautiful girl, who spurns their advances. The girl turns out to be their pal's heartbeat. Star of the show is Ray Corrigan. The other feature is "Pacific Blackout" with Robert Preston and Martha O'Driscoll about a killer and an innocent girl finding each other in a blackout
